FIRST EDITION. THE MISSING BELLE. MANY THINK HANDSOME MARIE TAYLOR IS IN BOSTON.

Clandestine Meetings Between Young Penitentiary and the Royal Keeper's Beautiful Daughter Before the Disappearance—The Young Man Maintains a Careless Air.

COCONA, Nov. 13.—Probably never will the attention of society in this town be directed to a more absorbing topic than that which now engages the public mind, and which concerns the handsome daughter of Mr. J. H. Taylor, proprietor of the Thorsen House, and the young man, the Penitentiary, who, it is said, holds the young woman a prisoner in some unknown place.

The exact complexion of this case cannot be determined until development commences.

There was a perfect rush for Herald's copy of the story, and the circulation of the paper was increased to an extent which is a credit to the management.

It is not to be expected that the young man will be released until the case is cleared up.

The Thorsen House, which is the scene of the scene, is a very singular drama, in one of the oldest localities in New England.

The present proprietor, who is from Newburyport, has been in charge of the Thorsen since the early part of 1898.

His family consists of his wife and two daughters—Belle, aged 17, and Marie, aged 15.

The subject of the existing sensation, who is 25 years old, was married to a young man who was a member of the same family.

Some years ago Marie was sick for a long time, and her father, who is a physician, was called in to attend to her.

She was completely recovered, and her father was very much pleased with the result.

She was then married to a young man who was a member of the same family.
