(From Friday's Daily.)

Hamar Greenwood, M. P. for York, and parliamentary secretary to Winston Churchill, president of the board of trade, was the guest to-day at lunch of the Canadian Club at the Balmoral notel, and was introduced by Judge Lampman to the assemblage as a successful Canadian educated at Toronto who had achieved a distinctive suc cess in England in law and politics. He British Columbia.

Mr. Greenwood in a brilliant address full of humor spoke of the splen-did educational facilities that were open to the children of Canada. He aned that he at all times endeavored to familiarize himself with Canada and Canadians, but could never overlook the Mother Country, the backbone of the Empire, to which he referred in the following happy phrases: "Fair in sport, honest in business, brave in war and in victory generous." and then pointed to her population of 44,000,000 with her one resource of coal. The guest sat at the right of the president of the club, Judge Lampman,

May I take you all to the colonial office on Downing street, London, and from the tess and complimented her upon th point of view of that great department, luncheon she had provided for the octhe great self-governing colonies, Can-ada, Australia, New Zealand, New Foundland, and South Africa. Then there is a class of colony like the West Among those pre-Indies that have partial self-governdomains.

"When we talk about the unity of and parts that must be considered in any scheme. "At different times in the world's history there have been different systems of union. The old empire of Spain insisted on a religious unity throughout her lands and that was a failure. Germany to-day is compelling ner unwilling subject states like Poland to adopt the German language and have a lingual unity. Fiscal unity was tried by the British Empire over a hundred years ago and was abandoned as much in the interests of the home country as in those of the great DEATH OF PIONEER colonies. Whatever the future may bring forward I am clearly of the view that at the present moment the prac tical basis of greater union of the Em pire is unity for defense. Here w have an identity of interest for every part that requires defense whether it be a remote island in the Pacific, the coast of British Columbia or the home country herself. The really great re sult of late Colonial conference was the practical centralization in case of war of all the fighting forces of the British Empire under the control of the war office in London. This had long been an ideal of serious men in England and Mr. Haldane and the Colonial prime ministers did a notable service to the crown when they brought about this desirable result. Let me say here frankly whilst there is a union for defense now, the whole the two controversies which arose in Canada on the Japanese and the Hindu questions, and said that while the Bri-tish government sympathised with an ideal of a white Canada, it must be re-rest entry of the first line of defense, the fleet rests entirely on the shoulders of the people of England. I hear many fellow-Canadians expressing fluent, earnest views as to what Old England abered that were Canada to exclude ought or ought not to do, but they do Hindus and Japanese, then in the event not seem to realize the very integrity of England going to war with Japan, and safety of this Dominion and in-Canada would rely considerably on the deed of this beautiful province to-day fighting forces of India for her protec- is guaranteed and maintained not by tion. Continuing, he said: noughts the British Empire flourishes, but the men and the money, and don't ever forget it, comes from the much abused, but I think the greatest coun-try in the world to-day, the little isl-and in the North Sea called England. (Loud applause.)

I would like to remind the speaker that we are rapidly going along the line of assuming some of our re-sponsibilities that the Mother Country has shouldered in regard to the defence of Canada. We may in course of time have a navy of our own, which we hope to build up allied, of course, with Prince Rupert, Sept. 11.-The closing own of the British Columbia Tie & Timber Company's saw-mill at Seal Harbor, two miles east of town, came as a great surprise to the people of Prince Rupert. This action of the company cannot be accounted for here, and the motive is hard to understand as there is a big demand for lumber at the present time, and saw-mills in this vicinity have orders for more, lumber than can be turned out.
