owed Mr. Davies, said .-Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen As a Liberal hailing from another country, I heartily thank you for the privilege ac corded to me in being invited unexpectedly to address the electors of the noble county of Westmorland. I did not come to make a speech, but to listen to what was said. I think it is proper that from time to time the public mind should be turned to the consideration of the underlying principles of both the Conservative and Liberal parties. There are times in the speech of the people of the Northwest dug by the Conservative ministry—(applause)—and there trace the grave of the people of the Northwest dug by the Conservative ministry—(applause)—and there trace the grave of the people of the Northwest dug by the Conservative ministry—(applause)—and there trace the grave of the people of the Northwest dug by the Conservative ministry—(applause)—and there trace the grave of the people of the Northwest dug by the Conservative ministry—(applause)—and there trace the grave of the people of the Northwest dug by the Conservative ministry—(applause)—and there trace the grave of the people of the Northwest dug by the Conservative ministry—(applause)—and there trace the grave of the people of the Northwest dug by the Conservative ministry—(applause)—and there trace the grave of the people of the Northwest dug by the Conservative ministry—(applause)—and there trace the grave of the people of the Northwest dug by the Conservative ministry—(applause)—and there trace the grave of the people of the Northwest dug by the Conservative ministry—(applause)—and there trace the grave of the people of the Northwest dug by the Conservative ministry—(applause)—and there trace the grave of the people of the Northwest dug by the Conservative ministry—(applause)—and there trace the grave of the people of the Northwest dug by the Conservative ministry—(applause)—and there trace the grave of the people of the Northwest dug by the Conservative ministry—(applause)—and there trace the grave of the people of the Northwest dug by the Conservative ministry—(applause)—and there trace the grave of the people of the Northwest dug by the Conservative mini some great question.

OUR POLITICAL PARTIES and is founded upon, as Hon W E Gladstone has said, "trust in the people."

This is the fundamental principle of Liberalism the world over, but if you examine the underlying principles of the Conservative party, they are a wheedling of the public mind, a corrupting of the public conscience. (Loud applause.) I will now ask you to consider, what is the record of the Liberal party? The Liberal the old Reform, or the old Liberal party to which I beleng in spite of myself, and of which I claim to be a staunch member, has given to this country the boon of responsible government. (Applause.) Now those of you wno are old enough will remember the state of things which existed member the state of things which existed And it may be as well to apply that with before we had responsible government in this province; and in looking back you will know that an oligarchy ruled this province. They not only collected the selves.

THE OLD REFORM PARTY toiled hard to remedy this state of things, taxation without representation. (Applause.) If the Liberal party had done only this one thing alone, the carrying ceive the support of the people. They have done more than that, for we find the old Reform party, of which the Liberal party is but the heir, gave the ballot to this country, thus freeing the poor from the rich man's claws. I am of the opinion that the Liberal party has, from their history, shown in all instances that they took their stand upon "a trust in the people," for by giving to every man the ballot meant trusting the people. The granting of responsible government, and the establishment of representative institutions, meant "trusting in the people. The Conservative party opposed these measures, but the Liberal party, undaunted by their opposition, went on and gave the people an independent parliaof bribery or other causes, should be carried, and not to a corrupt parliament. Their fiscal policy is a trust in the people, for it is no hot bed principle of forcing trade by artificial means. They, trusting that the people could by their muscle and brains make a living for themselves if not a competency, adopted the policy of Re ciprocity with the United States.

THE LIBERAL PLATFORM. Our opponents say to us, "it is true that your party has a history, and it is geod enough; but you offer the people no platform." On the 26th June last, the Liberal party held a convention in the city of Fredericton and agreed upon platform from which I extract three planks, Reciprocity, Reform of the Sen-ate, and Manhood Suttrage.

RECIPROCITY I say if there were no other name than Reciprocity written upon the banner of the Liberal party, they should carry the public vote in the coming election. You know what reciprocity did for us when we had it before, and know how successfully it operated. I think as the Liberal party now favor it, and have made it a plank in their platform, they should carry the coming elections in these lower REFORM OF THE SENATE. Then we have in our platform the plank Reform in the Senate, and I must say I believe in that Reform. I believe the Senate should be reformed in some way. Either they should be elected from the people, or nominated for their posi-tions by the legislatures of the different provinces, and as the Liberal party think a reform in this direction is needed they show trust in the people and should re ceive their support on this plank. At the time of Confederation we were told it was necessary to have the Senate in order to keep a balance of power between parties, but according to the present a mode of appointment to that body I am afraid it has become more political than independent. It is nothing but right that if a man gees up to Ottawa as a Senator that he should go up representing the province in which he resides, and the Two through Freight Trains leave only way to do this outside of election is that he be named by the provincial legislature, and not as at present by the Dominion government.

MANHOOD SUFFRAGE. Then you will agree with me that Man-Then you will agree with me that Manhood Suffrage is a very important and much-needed reform, and on that issue the Liberal party has a square record. Why should a man, because he owns real estate or property to the value of $100, have a rote and have a right to say who shall a vote, and have a right to say who shall make the laws of the country, while other men of equal or more intelligence are debarred from this privilege? Why should a man because he is possessed of money vote, while a poor man is not allowed to do so? When volunteers are wanted to go and fight for the defence of our country's honor, does the recruiting officer find the rich and wealthy flocking to his standard? No, but it is the poor man whom he finds shoulder the rifle, and not shrinking from danger maybes to the frent for the pre-danger maybes to the frent for the prebarred from this privilege? Why should danger, marches to the front for the preservation of his country's honor. (Cheers.) I, therefore, think that as the Liberal party have placed in their platform the three planks of Reciprocity, Reform of the Senate and Manhood Suffrage, all GAZETEER AND HISTORY tending to the further advancement of tending to the further advancement of the liberties of the people; and as the DOMINION OF CANADA, Tory party have always opposed these measures, the Liberal party should have your support. I feel that the day is not far distant when the present corrupt government will be hurled from power, and when that is done, and a new administrative leadership of the support of the su Tory party have always opposed these IN NINE VOLUMES, ROYAL 8vo may, with reciprocal trade established between us and the United States, fairly Montreal, 4th August, 1886.

at look forward to a new era of success.

(Loud applause.) THE YOUNG MEN. To the young men I would appeal, as a young man, to make a survey of the different camps and then pender well in which they will pitch their tent. If perchance that tent should be pitched in the Conservative camp they will come upon

A CAMP OF CEMETERIES lying principles of both the Couservative and Liberal parties. There are times in try—(applause)—and there trace the grave SCOWS FOR SALE. and Liberal parties. There are times in every country when parties may spring up, but you will find in the country where they did spring from, they arose from the agitation of the public mind on some great question.

There are times in a very country when parties may spring in which they have interred the people's rights. You have heard how they interred the people's rights. You have interred the people's rights are rights and are decked over. They are sound, the last and previous sessions. Coming the last and previous sessions. On the sound rights are rig
