self, although he did not know the cause. He did not go with the party from Brentwood, but he followed them in a few days. It was a wonderful change from the green, sweet woodlands of Warwickshire, to the country bordering on a sunny southern sea.

Dene Abbey was a very old house, and that hundred of years before had belonged to an ancient order of friars. Bluff King Harry took possession of it, and gave it to one of his favorite courtiers. In course of time it came into the hands of the Rosedene family, who valued highly the grand old mansion and magnificent estate. The duchess always insisted upon spending a few months there every year. Modern rooms and modern luxuries had been added to the old mansion, but it still retained enough of its antiquity to be one of the show places of England.

From the windows, from the terraces, from the grassy knolls in the park—from every part, the sea was visible.

Dene lay in Sussex, near the little town of Southwood, which was a favorite watering-place. When calm, the water of the Channel lay like a fair mirror in the distance. When it was rough, the foam and the dashing spray seemed almost to envelop the Abbey.

There had been nothing wanting in the poetry of Leah's love-story; but if anything could deepen the romance of it, it was certainly the presence of the beautiful, restless, heaving sea.

The duchess had but one notion of pleasing her guests at Dene, and it was to give them perfect liberty. Some liked the woods, some the yellow sands, some the over-changing sea. They went where they liked and did as they liked, which was the great charm of the place.

Laugh When People Step On Your Feet

Try this yourself then pass it along to others. It works!

Ouch! This kind of rough talk will be heard less here in town if people troubled with corns will follow the simple advice of this Cincinnati authority, who claims that a few drops of a drug called Freezone when applied to a tender, aching corn stops soreness at once and soon the corn dries up and lifts right out without pain.

He says Freezone is an ether compound which dries immediately and never inflames or even irritates the surrounding tissue or skin. A quarter of an ounce of Freezone will cost very little at any drug store, but is sufficient to remove every hard or soft corn or callus from one's feet. Millions of American women will welcome the announcement since the inauguration of the high heels.

So Sir Basil, who liked the sea, and Leah, whose passionate soul delighted in it, were often on the beach together. They enjoyed the firm, yellow sands, the dancing, crested waves, the tall white cliffs covered with luxuriant vegetation, the briny odor of the sea-breeze, the pretty shells and pebbles on the beach, the seaweed which drifted with the waters. They spent long hours together, listening to the music of the waves and talking of the beauty that lay around. And during this time, while the sea-gulls whirled in the air, while the southern wind kissed the waves, the heart of the girl who loved Sir Basil became entirely his, her life so wholly wrapped in his, that death would have been easier than to see him pass out of it.

The duchess remarked it, and mourned over it, but did not interfere—it was too late. But she said to herself over and over again that it was ten thousand pities Leah had so much romance in her nature; she would have been so much happier had she been more like ordinary girls.

lightful. The drawing-room was an immense apartment, containing five large windows. From them one stepped on to a smooth, green lawn; and from the lawn a short path led through the woods to the cliffs and the sea. When the moon shone on the white cliffs and the shifting water, the effect was dazzling. There the duchess liked the lamps to be lowered and the windows all thrown open, when the wind, laden with sweet odors from land and sea, came in.
