SATURDAY NIGHT BY OUR CURBSTONE OBSERVER.

In the course of many years there are few men who have had more op-portunities of observing their fellow men and the trend of events at the close of each week than I have had. There is scarcely a place of import-ance, or of insignificance, in Canada (I'll say nothing of any other coun-try) that I have not lived in, or, at least, visited. From the Indian camp to the halls of the university, from the remotest settlement to the House of Commons, in village, town, and city, I have had occasion to spend Saturday nights, and I need say what a variety of scenes I have witnessed. Leaving aside the smaller places, and confining my observa-tions, for the purposes of this week's contribution, to the city of Montreal I can honestly say that the last

And it is upon Satur-day night, almost invariably, that these sad scenes and these tragic events occur. Many is the poor wife that dreads Saturday and its pay; many is the miserable child that prays fervently that Saturday may not be the precursor of a hungry and cursed Sunday. Were men, real men-not the brute category of hungarity --to reflect upon all the hundred ills that spring from Saturday's awful night, upon the tears, the page, the chils, the hunger, the thirst, the nakedness, the partperism, the lust, the debauch, the crimes, out of num-ber, that herald in the glorious "Day of the Lord,"--to use the words from Tomson's "Winter" :--"'Vice, in its high career would stand

I will have more to say about Saturday night in another issue.

A BANK TELLER.—Another ter-rible lesson is that afforded by the suicide of the defaulting bank teller of the Continental National Bank of New York, J. Provost Mason. who committed suicide rather than face the ordeal of a trial for his crime of having embezzled $12,000. Mason was forty-eight years old, and for twenty-eight years had been a trust-ed employee of the Continental Bank. He had filled various positions and was considered one of the most trustworthy ben in the institution. He lived with his wife and seven-teen-year-old daughter, Grace, in a neat frame cottage at Washington and Wendover avenues.
