lots of fun." Aunt Helen laughed as she gave her consent, and a moment later Denise had let down the bars of the day stall and was dragging Ned Toodles out by his forelock, much to that animal's disgust, for it was nearly twelve o'clock, and that meant dinner time for him. It took her only a jiffy to whisk his harness on him, and a few moments later she rattled out of the playhouse, down the driveway and out of the

It was not more than a mile to the village, but that mile tried Denise's patience.

Ned bounced and jerked along, first upon one side of the road and then upon the other, in order to show his disapproval at being sent upon an errand just at dinner time.

"I certainly think I shall do something dreadful to you, if you don't behave yourself. What makes you act so, anyway?" she cried, as she drew up his rein and cracked her whip threateningly. "I'd be ashamed of myself to make such a fuss just because I thought my dinner was going to be half an hour later," she continued, in a scathing tone. A fig cared Ned for anybody's opinton, and as Denise came up to the store at which she had to stop and turned around so that Ned was headed toward home, he gave his head a saucy way, as though to say:

"Perhaps some people had better reserve their opinions until they are Tie strap in hand, Denise hopped out of the wagon, but just as she was about to tie Ned, for she had very pronounced misgivings of his sense of honor, the proprietor of the store slipped out to say: "I know what you have come for,

Miss Denise, but we will send it at "I will take it with me in the back of my wagon, Mr. Groves, thank you. "Very well. I'll send it right out." Denise stepped back into the wagon to wait, and then came the beginning of Ned's humiliation. Dong! rang out the bell of the town clock. Dong! until twelve strokes of the bell had sounded. Ned knew a great deal, and he must also have known how to count, for as the last stroke rung out he began to fidget. "Now you are up to some new prank," said Denise to herself, "and I won't say one word, but will see what you will do." So she let the reins hang loose and kept perfectly still. Ned's blinders prevented him from seeing her, but one car was laid back to listen. Denise sat as silent as the whip socket. First a sidling step away from the curbstone; then another. Still no restraint, from the Surely Denise must have wagon. gone into that store, thought Ned. . Two or three more steps took him well into the middle of the road, and that road led home and to dinner.

Still it would be wiser to listen again, and a knowing pair of ears were prepared to catch the faintest sound from the wagon. But no sound came, although Denise was nearly convulsed with laughter. Surely things were progressing famously, and when dinner was to be had so casily why not go after it? And off my laddle started, at a brisk pace. But walking was slow work. Not a wehicle was in sight, so very shortly Master Ned was trotting along at a fine rate.

"Dear me, trotting is a very commonplace manner of getting over the ground. Can't we improve on it?" Surely, and a moment later the little villain was bounding along like a deer, the wagon jerking and rattling behind him. By this time Denise thought the joke had gone far enough, and so said in her most sarcastic tone: "Well, sir, how much further do you intend to run?" But the effect was astonishing. With one final bound Ned stopped short. Snap went the breeching straps, and over went Denise, landing straight across the dashboard, with her hands spread out upon Ned's fat haunches, where she could only lie and laugh. When she had laughed tillshe couldn't laugh any more, she scrambed out, and, walking to Ned's head, peeped over the blinders, and beheld a very subdued little horse.

"Well, sir, when I've fixed up your harness and gotten you into some sort of shape again, we'll go back for the sugar, if you please, and it would serve you just exactly right if you did not get one bit of dinner until two o'clock instead of one."—Gabriells Jackson.

Awful Enferings. My buby had a terrible breaking out all over his face and head, extending half way down his back, while his arm became one solid, scaly, bleeding sore. A physician gave me a prescription which I used, but he kept getting worse, and suffered beyond description. The pain became so it tense that he had to be put under opiates. We could get no rest, night or day. He dwindled down to a mere skeleton. Everybody who saw him said he would surely die. As a last resort a trip to the country was suggested, that the change of air might do him good. As soon as my mother saw the child she got a copy of an Atlanta paper, in which there was an account of a wonderful cure CUTICURA REMEDIES had wrought on a tiwe year-old child. My father started to the nearest drug store, which was five miles, and purchased CUTICURA (outniest), CUTICURA SOAP, and CUTICURA (outniest), CUTICURA On his head, face, arm, and book. The child siept for over two hours that night, improved bally, and in nine weeks from the time he started on the CUTICURA REMEDIES to discontinue their use, and not a sign is left to tell of his awful sufferings. WHISKEY MEDICINES.

The temperance press is emphasiz-ing the danger to the home in the use of "medicines" which are loaded with whiskey or alcohol. In this respect, as well as in the remarkable charac ter of their cures, Dr. Pierce's medicines differ from other preparations. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and "Favorite Prescription" contain no alcohol, whiskey or other intoxicant, and are equally free from opi-um, cocaine and other narcotics. Every family should have a copy of the People's Common Sense Medical Ad-viser, sent absolutely free, on receipt of stamps to pay expense of mailing and customs. Send 31 one-cent stamps for the book in paper sovers, or 50 stamps for cloth binding. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Carnegie believes in letting trusts alone, and in the May Century in a paper called "Popular Illusions About Trusts" he explains his atti-

Every attempt to monopolize the nufacture of any staple article caries within its bosom the seeds of failure. Long before we could legis-late with much effect against trusts there would be no necessity for legislation. The past proves this, and the future is to confirm it. There should be nothing but encouragement for these vast aggregations of capital for the manufacture of staple article. As for the result being an increase of price to consumer beyond a brief period, there need be no fear. On the contrary, the inevitable result of these aggregations is finally and permanently to give to the consumer cheaper articles than would have been otherwise possible to obtain, for capital is stimulated by the high profits of the trust for a season to embark against it. The result is very soon a capacity of production beyond the wants of the consumer and as the new works erected are of the most improved pattern and cap able of producing cheaper than the old works the vulnerable trusts are compelled to buy and capitalize at two or three times their cost. There thus no danger ahead to the comunity from trusts nor any cause

Cromwell as an Idol.

"It was not until 1645," says Mr. Morley in The Century, "that Croni-well had begun to stand out clear in the popular imagination, alike of friends and foes, as a leader of men. He was now the idol of his troops. He prayed and preached among them; he played uncouth practical jokes with them; he was not above a snowball match with them; he was a risk, energetic, skillful soldier, and he was an invincible commander. Parliament he made himself felt, as aving the art of hitting the right tebating nail upon the head.
