To the Editor of The Planet: The writer, in conversation with one of our most progressive citizens schools, both of which institutions enjoyed themselves to the full. Many, in fact all, Sunday schools in the city could hold their annual outing here, as there is a good track for bicycles, foot races, and all kinds of room for other sports. Smimming baths could be erected and a nominal fee charged, which would make it self-sustaining, with the probability of its being a source of revenue. The pavilion could be erected of sufficient dimensions to admit of a large crowd of children in case of rain. It could contain a first-class caterer's stand, the fees line—another source of revenue. With very little outlay the boats could land their passengers close to the park. There are three railroads—the Grand Trunk, the C. P. R. and the Pere Marquette — which probably would send traffic to this park by way of picnic parties, excursions, etc. The Pere Marquette Railway could easily erect a flag station alongside the park, thereby making it easily accessible for unolading and re-loading quickly.
