Getting Stale and Coming Back.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON.

penney and her last friend.

Poor little girl. She's only nineteen and she has been working a little less than a year. This is probably her first experience with going stale and she thinks it's something tragic and final, something peculiar that has singled her out as a victim.

Whether We Cook or Finance.

She doesn't know that we all, every mother's son and daughter of us, whether our profession be stenography, home making, writing, engineering, making millions in business, or cooking, and no matter how sincerely we love that profession, find ourselves going stale every once in a while.

And she doesn't know the happy ending of this sad sounding story, which is that in nine thousand, nine hundred and ninety-nine cases out of every ten thousand, we gradually find ourselves coming back to our old love and zest and power for work.

There are times when it seems to me that I can never write another word, and certainly not one even remotely worth reading. Years ago these moods used to worry me. I was sure they presaged the end of the world,—my world, I mean. And then I found that, sometimes gradually, sometimes suddenly, the old love and zest came flooding back.

Even the Mother Sometimes Gets Stale.

A mother surely ought to love her profession as much as anyone in the world, yet sometimes mothers get stale at their supreme profession. Perhaps they don't put it in just those words but that is what is really happening to them when they find themselves growing irritable and impatient, when they punish in unreasonable anger instead of trying to be just, when the prattle of little voices grates on their ears instead of making music for them.

When a trainer finds that the athletes under him are getting stale from over-training he sometimes has them give up their strict routine for a day or two.

If we could all do this when we get stale we'd come back more quickly than we do. The best thing for my little friend would be to leave her office work for a few days, put it out of her mind and her life and do something absolutely different. The best thing for me would be to shut up my desk; the best thing for the mother would be to go away from her children for a few days. We would all gain infinitely more than we lost.

Even the Mother Sometimes Gets Stale.

But alas, some of us cannot steal these precious few days, and most of us think we can't.

Well, then, do the next best thing: get some change into your life by hook or crook. Go away for one day; spend it with someone you like and whom you do not often see. Spend a day out of doors. Nothing in the world will blow away staleness so quickly as fresh air. Treat yourself to some luxury. Do anything to get your mind out of its rut.

And above all things, don't worry about being stale. Nothing keeps you stale so surely as worrying about it. Courage, comrade, to-morrow may find you your old self. Or if not to-morrow, at least the day after.

TERRITORIAL EXPANSION FOR ITALY DEMANDED.

Rome, March 14.—Territorial expansion for Italy with new dominions "beyond the seas, especially on the Mediterranean," must be obtained, declared the Giornale d'Italia in a long article, regarded here as of a semi-official nature, in which the present crisis is discussed. Italy's seven months' neutrality, the paper says, was not lost for not only have her interests been defended but the nation has acquired greater political and military force.

"Since the beginning of the war," the Giornale d'Italia says, "Italy has declared her neutrality only until her own interests are in question thus intending to exclude any renunciation of her rights and proclaiming for her the amplest liberty of action. Neutrality has been maintained despite foreign flatteries and the pressure of internal agitation. The forces of the belligerents gradually are wearing out, while our energies are augmented."

"All have slowly recognized Italy's right to have the amplest liberty of action against any one. Thus foreign countries have abandoned the strange idea that they would be able to enlist Italy in the name of sentimentalism. Like the romantic knight errant, or in the aid of great powers aspiring to the domination of the world."

"There is now beginning the second phase of the war which probably will be decisive. Italy has a frontier problem which for fifty years has oppressed her like a yoke, as the result of the unfortunate war of 1866, which forced Italy when she took the Venetian province to accept a confining which has been a threat. Now that the configuration of Europe, perhaps of a great part of the world, is about to be decided, we must and will obtain by every means, a frontier which politically and from a military viewpoint is in no sense a menace."

"Her anti-Italian policy in the Italian provinces within her borders was Austria's fatal mistake. It cannot and must not continue. These Italian provinces must be saved from destruction. A nation of 37,000,000 inhabitants, bordered almost entirely by the sea, a great exporter of men, and with agricultural, industrial and commercial interests which are constantly developing, needs expansion beyond the seas; especially on the Mediterranean."

The newspaper says this statement summarizes the great problem which Italy must solve "by sacrificing blood and money, if necessary." It declares the nation must be constantly prepared for any eventuality.

GOING TO SCHOOL.

WALTY MASON.

"I hate to fool my feet to school," we hear the boy confess; "I'd like to play the living house fitter, and dodge the useful lesson. The rule of three gives pain to me, old Euclid makes me weary, the verbs of Greece disturb my peace, geography is dreary. I'll go and fish! I do not wish to spend my lifetime schooling; I do not care to languish there, and hear the teacher drooling." His books he hates, his maps and slates, and all the school-house litter; he feels oppressed and longs for rest, his sorrow makes him bitter. The years scot on and soon are gone, for years are restless frisks; the schoolboy small is now grown tall, and has twelve kinds of whiskers. "Alas," he sighs, "had I been wise, when I was young and sassy, I well might hold, now that I'm old, a situation classy. But all the day I thought of play, and fooled away my chances, and here I strain, with grief and pain, in rotten circumstances. I'm always strapped; I'm handicapped by lack of useful knowledge; through briny tears I view the years I loathed in school and college!"

ETHIE COMING HERE.—On her return to Placentia the Ethie will come here to be renovated for the Trinity Bay service.

AFTER SUFFERING TWO LONG YEARS

Mrs. Aselin Was Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Minneapolis, Minn.—"After my little one was born I was sick with pains in my sides which the doctors said were caused by inflammation. I suffered a great deal every month and grew very thin. I was under the doctor's care for two long years without any benefit. Finally after repeated suggestions to try it we got Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. After taking the third bottle of the Compound I was able to do my housework and today I am strong and healthy again. I will answer letters if anyone wishes to know about my case."—Mrs. JOSEPH ASELIN, 628 Monroe St., N.E., Minneapolis, Minn.
