Peps will give you relief.
Simply dissolve a Peps tablet in your mouth. Your breath carries the medicinal Pine vapor, which is released, to all parts of the throat, nasal and air passages, where a liquid medicine could not possibly reach. This vapor destroys all germs with which it comes in contact, seothes and fortifies you against coughs, colds, sore throat, bronchitts and zippe. Peps contain absolutely no harmful drugs and are therefore the safest remedy for children.

Some years ago, while shaking hands with a friend, his fingers came in contact with the lighted end of a cigar, and for a day or two he was unable to play. Thereupon he heavily insured each of his fingers, and to reduce the chance of such a happening again he made it a rigid rule not to shake hands.

An Editor's Confidence.

THE CAT IS AT LAST OUT OF TE EDITOR'S PAG and the mystery hat to many has enshrouded his office is laid bare. Writers for the press have so often invented strange easons to explain to themselves why they are "rejected" that this statement of the real reasons will enlighten many minds. Mr. Holbrook Jackson, of To-day (London), calls the ignorance of the way an editor should be approached "invincible." For all that, he takes heart of grace and sets out to lighten "his own burden and that of his fellows of the craft." The observance of the following rules, he thinks, "would augment the amenities between literary asperants for the honor of print and those who have the power of pronouncing yea or nay upon what is submitted to them." They begin

1. Typewrite your copy or handwrite it clearly.

2. Write your name and address clearly on the back of the page of pescript or manuscript.

3. Enclose not a loose stamp but a stamped and addressed envelope. 4. Don't write a letter of explanation to the editor. But if you do

5. Don't tell him your stuff is good he won't take your word. 6. Don't tell him it is bad-bad writing needs no bush.

7. Don't tell him that your friends like it-he doesn't care. 8. Don't say that another editor adrised you to send it along—that would make him suspicious. 9. Don't say you want to earn money We have already twice written of but to edit his paper and pay those able, uncommon, uncouth, unquiet and who help him. 10. Don't flatter him-editors are by writing-he is not out to help you,

11. Don't tell him you know his old unt-he may hate her. 12. Don't ask him his opinion-he may not have one. 13. Don't ask why he rejects your offer-he may not know. One added caution seemed too important to condense into a line: and must heard of the voice of your "Those about to try to become conuninteresting geese. Whenever your tributors to a particular magazine geese cry unquietly we all can think would be well advised to purchase or borrow a copy first, so as to form an opinion what it is like. If this precaution is not taken it is as well not to say anything about it. Above all. Kill your hateful geese!
