Scene of Strife is Rich in Folk-Lore.

Recent news despatches from Ireand contained the story of 2a ambush and battle between Sinn Feiners and Crown forces in the Slieve-namon country, County Tipperary. To those who have read and studied the history of Ireland the name will strike a familiar chord.

The Valley of Slieve-na-mon is a country rich in historical interest. Many of the stirring events which grace the annals of Irish history have been enacted there. Perhaps : in no other section of southern Ireland will you find such a wealth of historic events, such a storehouse of folk-lore and fairy legends and such typically Irish people as you will find in this section.

It was here in 1848 that Smith O'-Brien and the Young Ireland Party gathered their forces; it was here a pitched battle took place between them and the Royal Irish Constabulary and British military, and it was here occurred many of the stirring events of the Fenian rebellion.

The Valley of Slieve-na-mon is socalled from the mountain of that name which at times towers aloft cold, dark and repellant, but when clothed in the soft gray mists of early morning or bathed in the glamor of an Irish sunset is truly a sight to gladden the senses. The valley embraces part of that section of Tipperary called the Golden Vale of Munster, said to be the richest farming land in all of Ireland.

Away to the northeast is the famous Devil's Bit Mountain, another of the Galtee range. It was on this Mountain that Cromwell is said to have stood when he turned to his soldiers and said: "This is indeed a land well worth fighting for."

The sides of the mountain are very steep and the climb a hard one, but the view well repays for the trouble. Away to the north a vista of wonderful blue hills and little green valleys and afar off a glimpse of the lardly Shannon and to the south the beautiful Golden Vale dotted over with little white-washed cottages and farm houses. Further south is the famous Rock of Cashel, the seat of the Kings of Munster, a very interesting series of ruins and well worthy a visit.

Romantic Abduction.

Rathronan, in the vicinity of which the recent Sinn Fein ambushes occurred, was the scene of a most romantic abduction some years ago, when the lovely and charming Miss Arbuthnot was abducted by Carden of Barnane, who was owner of one of the most beautiful estates in Ireland. During the Fenian uprising, the Carden estate also figured in one of the most sensational murder trials of the time after an agent of the then absentee landlord Carden was shot. The Carden estate lies immediately south of Devil's Bit Mountain. There is a story attached to every place of note in Ireland and it goes without saying that the Devil's Bit has one. If you visit any of the peasant homes in the valley, the woman of the house will tell you this story as she bustles about preparing you a cup of tea: One day, the devil, through some mistake, landed in the Emerald Isle and, having lost his way, became very hungry. He dare not enter any peasant's cabin and ask for food or shelter for he knew that few and far between were the homes where a little wooden cross was not hanging on the wall.

He sat down at the foot of the mountain a while and was sorely troubled. But on looking up he saw a goat making its way up the rough mountain side and instantly he was on his feet. He started in hot pursuit, but the goat being very nimble. as are most of his kind, seemed to be getting the best of the race.

Enraged with fear of losing his prey the ruler of the lower regions let out a terrific roar and opening his huge mouth bit a hole out, of the mountain side. And the "bit" is there to-day to show itself. And if you are a doubting Thomas you will find the rocks which he could not swallow scattered over the mountain side, some of them large enough to build a good-sized house.

Glamor and Romance.

There are many other tales and legends told concerning these Tipperary mountains and as we wander along their heather covered sides and the glamor and the romance of the Irish atmosphere creeps into our being, we can readily believe in them

The country around Slieve-na-mon is the country that Charls J. Kickham, the Tipperary poet and writer, immortalized in his famous "Knocknagow," a book that has been read and reread by all who love the land of the shamrock and which you will find in even the meanest cabin home in Tipperary. It was the same country the Irish poet Davis had in mind when he wrote:

"You see him in his cabin rude, Or dancing with his dark-haired Mary, You'd swear they knew no other mood Than mirth and love in Tipperary."

Every home-made article you buy means a day's work for a NEWFOUNDLAND workman.
