SIDE TALKS.

By Ruth Cameron.

BUT ARE THEY RESPECTABLE.

"Tears do not make sages they only make old men."

—Madame Swetchine.

I heard a child rebuked the other day in a way which aroused the same resentment in my heart that it so obviously did in the child's.

"The child was a girl about 12."

She had just had a painful experience with a very disagreeable old woman, a thoroughly unamiable, egotistic, ignorant old woman whom no one in the neighborhood likes. The old woman was filled with indignation and expressed her opinion of the old woman to her mother.

"It isn't Respectful."

Her mother brought her up sharply.

"Why not, mother? She said just what I said she did. You don't think that was nice do you?"

"Well, perhaps not; but she was an old lady and you ought not to talk that way about her. It isn't respectful to talk that way about older people."

"But mother, but..."

Ruthie, evidently filled with a sense of injustice, and then ended helplessly. "But I don't think that's fair."

What She Probably Meant.

If the child had been a little more articulate, a little more able to reason things out and express them she might well have said:

"Why should I respect her when she isn't respectable?"

For the old lady certainly isn't respectable. Not in the original sense of that word which was "worthy of respect."

There used to be an idea that children ought to be taught to respect old people just because they are old.

I think that's a false idea. It's bad for us as children because we instinctively sense the false idea of values behind it. It's bad for us as we grow older because it perpetuates the idea that old people are free from the obligation to be decent and unselfish and intelligent if they want to be respected.

Teach Them Patience and Tolerance.

Teach children civility and patience with old age. Try to modify the positiveness of their judgments and by all means teach them the sense of Goethe's beautiful words: "It is only necessary to grow old to become more charitable and indulgent. I find no fault committed by others that I have not committed myself."

Try to make them realize that the slowness and the bodily infirmity of old age are inevitable and should be treated with the utmost tenderness. But don't demand that they respect that which is not respectable. They won't do it. They will simply resent the hypocrisy and dislike the old person the more because of the enforced respect.

Lessen Labor

In the kitchen there are many uses for Pearline. No washing powder can take its place. There is only one Pearline and that is what every woman who wishes to save time, labor, and expense should use. It does not injure the fabrics or the hands and can be used for cleaning everything. Ask your grocer for Pearline and experience a great relief from labor when washing in this toll saving compound.

MY HOME.

"This is my home," I've often said, "my shack, my henhouse and my shed, and only Death can come and say, 'My friend, you'll have to move away.' It is a solace, fine and great to walk about my small estate, to view the pump, the concrete walks, the clothesline and the cabbage stalks, the lawn swing and the tree and vine, and know that all these are mine. No landlord ever looms in view to tell me that the rent is due; no bailiff pauses at my gate to bid me pay or pull my freight. No man in rented house can feel the thrills that through my person steal, as I survey my chaste abode, with shady elms along the road, with picket fence, a pleasing pink, and basin where the birds may drink; my eyes, beholding, fairly shine. I swell with pride, the place is mine; I've counted every stone and stick, I know the color of each brick, I know the nailholes in the wall, and every crack, however small, and if a shingle or a slat should slip aside, I'm wise to that. I pity much the loosed gent who spends his lifetime paying rent; though he may live in stately hall with priceless paintings on the wall, though he may have a butler stern, and jewelry and cars to burn, he cannot know the joy and pride with which my bosom is supplied, when I survey my henhouse fine, and cry, "The whole blamed works are mine!"

Human Negligence

PRIMARY CAUSE OF FOREST FIRE PERIL.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 13. (A.P.)—The great forests of firs, pines, Spruces, hemlocks, redwoods and sequoias that stretch over the states of the Pacific Coast have been menaced more seriously by fires this summer than at any time in recent years. California, in the grip of a protracted drought, was the worst sufferer.

Despite the tinder-like condition of the California national forests, where the most disastrous of the fires have burned, Paul G. Redington, United States district forester here, is of the opinion that there would have been virtually no fire hazard, while last year it was at any time, if human carelessness could be eliminated.

In a recent statement, Mr. Redington attributed to negligence 657 of 839 fires in the state this year.

"About 80 per cent," he said, "are caused by careless campers, motorists, fishermen and others who frequent the forests. It is true that every summer a certain number of fires are started by lightning, but we do not fear the lightning fires. Generally they are started in exposed places at high elevations, spots easily discerned by our lookout men. It is usually a much simpler matter to put them out than to check those of human origin. Campers are apt to cause blazes along stream beds, in places less cool and less accessible."

So serious has the situation been in the California forests that the federal forester arranged for United States soldiers to patrol certain districts of the national reserves where the hazard was greatest. The federal forest service maintained a force of 450 men in this state throughout the summer, and at times, when several huge fires were burning in different national forests, thousands of temporary fire-fighters supplemented the regulars.

At times, when the fires were raging uncontrolled and, in several instances, towns were threatened, men near the scenes were conscripted for service. But this was resorted to rarely. At the close of July the fires all had been controlled and most of them were out, but the drought remained. Normally there is little rainfall on the Pacific Coast in summer. The dry spell in California, however, had started in the early spring. By the latter part of the summer the fed-

MEMBER'S PREDICTION.

WALLSEND, Eng., Aug. 1.—There will be a Labor government in this country in 1926 and Ramsay MacDonald will be prime minister, said Patrick Hastings, King's counsel and Labor member of Parliament, in the course of a speech to his constituents here recently. He deduced this from the fact that before 1910 Labor votes could be counted by a few thousands, but in 1918 the number was two and a quarter millions, while last year it was four and a half millions. At that rate of progress, he said, there would be a Labor government in power by 1926.

Nature Makes "Dry" Raid

ANCHORAGE, Alaska. (A.P.)—Within a week nature accomplished what a corps of deputy marshals and dry agents failed to do in many months. Two forest fires started by moonshine stills practically annihilated the industry in this region. Foresters report that they have come across a dozen stills destroyed by the flames. In some instances the owners barely escaped with their lives.

Canada Exports More Cream

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 25.—Heavy increase in the exportation of dairy products, particularly cream, from Canada to the United States is shown by figures prepared by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

In July, 1923, Canada, according to the report, shipped to the United States 437,679 gallons of fresh cream valued at $995,046 as compared with 339,829 gallons in June and 245,936 gallons in July of the preceding year.
