CHICAGO, April 29.—The second section of the Columbus express, with the Duke of Veragua and party, reached Grand Crossing shortly after 9 o'clock, where the reception committee boarded it. The meeting between the World's Fair commissioners and the duke's party was entirely informal. The duke was especially enthusiastic regarding the evidences of prosperity and industry that he had observed on every hand the repeatedly referred to what he repeatedly referred to as "this great wonderful country." Beccher's Favorite Story.

Beccher's Favorite Story.

A correspondent of the St. Louis GlobeDemocrat relates what he declares was Henry Ward Beecher's favorite story, which he never tired of telling. It may have been told before. It was the story of a traveling man who went to church one Sunday and fell asleep during the services.

After the minister finished his discourse he trequested all those who wished to go to heaven to please stand up, and all arose but the traveling man. An old lady in sitting down accidentally brushed upagainst the traveling man and woke him up. Just then the preacher said: "All those that wish to go to hell please stand up," and the traveling man, scarcely awake, and not knowing what the audience was doing, stood up. He looked around in a half-dazed way and saw no one else but the minister tanding, but he finally said: "Parson, I don't know what you are voting on, but you don't know what you are voting on, but you and I seem to be in a hopeless minority."
