Public No Wiser Since Nanaimo Miners Held Yesterday's

Silence and Mines Are Still Idle.

The Trouble Has Been Developing For Neady a Year Back.

From Our Own Corresponden Nanaimo, Feb. 16.-What action the miners of the Western Fuel Company will take is yet unknown to the outside public. The union held a meeting today in the opera house, but when adjournment was reached at noon nothing could be learned of what had transpired. It is supposed that the executive Mr. Bowser now have the matter in hand, and the miners are still idle pending a decision. HISTORY OF DISPUTE.

The crisis reached last week in the Nanaimo collieries has been developing for about a year. Last spring the management began to open up the lower seam at Protection mine, the men being employed at day work. The results were not satisfactory, and the proposition not satisfactory, and the proposition was made by Mr. Russell, the manager, that the work be undertaken by conthat the work be undertaken by con-tract at the rate prevailing throughout the mines, 68 cents a ton net. The men asked 80 cents net, but this Mr. Rus-sell declined to give. The question came up before the union, and after some negotiation with the management ended in the company ceasing operations in that part of the mine, declaring that it would not pay them to work it at the price asked, and the men saying that they could not make wages at the lower This threw about a hundred men out of work, and the settlement being of an unsatisfactory nature to both parties has not tended to preserve harparties has not tended to preserve har-mony between the miners affected and their employers. Some of the men have obtained employment since either here or elsewhere, but the net result has been the existence here for a year of a large body of men who were out of work. It was a comparatively small matter which brought the dissatisfaction with this condition to a head. When the new company took over the mines at beginning of the present month the allowance of 25 cents per shift paid to men working with safety lamps was stopped. Only twenty men were affected, and the total amount involved was $5 a day, a sum too small to have of itself caused a dispute lasting more than |

When, however, this matter was when, however, this matter was brought up in the union, the lower seam trouble was also taken up again and finally the mass meeting of Friday was arranged to consider both. Nor did the mass meeting when it convened conthe mass meeting when it convened confine itself to these. Other questions, from trifling grievances to the whole position as regarded the scale of wages were discussed, and apparently the men reached the conclusion that while they were adjusting their relations with the company they might as well do it thoroughly. The abolition of the duty on coal somewhat naturally pointed to the probability that the operators could now afford to pay more wages, and it was considered that an effort should be made to obtain some share of the benefit conferred by the act passed by the United States. Congress. The men finally demanded that the 25 cent allowance to the safety lamp men be resumed, and that the lower seam men be paid a dollar a ton gross (a little over 80 cents net) and pending the termination of the negotiations respecting these tion of the negotiations respecting these matters the mines were to remain idle. They also resolved to notify the comthat they would expect an increas of the scale of wages ranging from 10 to 20 per cent. according to the class of work for all men employed under-

After the termination of the mass meeting on Friday rumors of all kinds were distributed as to the interview which followed between the management and the executive of the union. On one hand it was stated that so satisfactory had been the result that the men would return to work this morning while on the other its men would return to work this morning, while on the other it was stated that no answer would be given to the executive until President Howard's arrival. Nothing really authentic could be obtained, and the mass meeting, therefore, resumed its deliberations this morning and now has adjourned with the general public very little the wiser as to the state of effairs than they were as to the state of affairs than they were when the adjournment of Friday

Island Railway Project to Be Laid Before an English Company.

Parksville Passes Resolution Favoring the Line Going From Wellington.

There is the best of reasons for believing that the Island railway project, with which the people of Victoria in common with the residents of the entire Island have been wrestling for weeks past, is likely to be an accomplished fact at a much earlier date than most people imagine. It will be remembered that the Colonist a short time ago made mention of the fact that Mr. H. P. Bell, C. E., was in touch with powerful capitalists in England who were thoroughly talists in England who were thoroughly competent to undertake the handling of ferred to such an enterprise, and that he had no doubt that if the project possessed all the elements of feasibility it was his succe said to contain, the said capitalists would display little hesitancy in taking hold of it. hold of it.
