always hear finding fault with their crops, and almost charging the Wise Dispenser of all things, as being less favorable with them than with some of their more wise and prudent neighbours.
 No man ought to expect a return for his labour, unless he give back to the soil, in some form, a part at least, of what he takes from it. It is to obviate in a great measure the evils consequent upon the practice of taking all, and returning nothing to the land, that is proposed to be effected by the rotation system. By heavy manuring and high cultivation, land may be made to produce one kind of grain, perhaps abundantly, for a number of years in succession—but the soil cannot without great expense of labour and manure, produce two or three crops of a kind without a perceptible falling off in the product. Spade round young fruit trees, and keep the ground clear and mellow round them.
