CONFERENCE ON SUBURBAN

"As an instance of the preference given to Montreal by way of suburban service, I take two plain routes the same distance from Montreal as Brampton and Whitby are from Toronto. According to railway timetables, there are twenty-one trains daily each way between Montreal and Vaudeville, a distance of 24 miles this side of Montreal. Eleven of these are operated by the Grand Trunk and by the Canadian Pacific. In the other direction, between Montreal and St. Johns, a distance of 27 miles, the Grand Trunk gives a service of eight trains daily each way. On the other hand, the Grand Trunk give a service of three trains between Toronto and Whitby, a distance of 23 miles east of Toronto, and a service of six trains daily between Brampton and Toronto. The Canadian Pacific also gives a service between Brampton and Toronto of two trains daily each way.

Montreal Benefits.
"The combined population of St. Johns and Vaudeville is 7100, while the population of Brampton and Whitby is 6400; that is, twenty-nine trains given for a population of 7100 in Quebec, and the comparative towns in Ontario get a service of eleven trains daily. I might say that the service from Montreal is purely suburban, while out of Toronto, with the exception of the new motor line instituted by the Canadian Pacific a few weeks ago, which makes a daily run to Brampton, the suburban towns are dependent on local train services for their service.

"I would suggest that a meeting of the delegates from the different municipalities interested be called at an early date, as an expression of opinion from the municipalities most interested would do much to attain the result desired."

Builds Up Cities.
The chairman stated that since the last meeting of the committee he had investigated the suburban service given by the railways in Montreal and Cleveland. While he found there had been considerable prejudice against the recent and cheap train services, which might be expected to promote an exodus from the large cities to the suburbs, there could be no doubt that it had the effect of building up Montreal and Cleveland. He had conferred with the Grand Trunk officials at Montreal, and they had indicated a willingness to hold a conference with the city on the subject.

Ald. Church read letters from the secretary of the board of trade and the secretary of the manufacturers' association stating that the question would be laid before those bodies after the holidays. He also had letters from the municipalities of Woodbridge, Whitby and Weston approving the suggestion.

Mr. Boulter, a member of the Brampton Board of Trade, presented a letter from the town clerk to the same effect.

Controller Spence suggested a conference with the suburban municipalities in order to secure united action. Then the committee could lay the matter before the board of railway commissioners. "If you arrange a deputation," he said, "it would have some weight."

Ald. McMurrich thought, however, that big holidays were not well influenced by sentiment.

Inducement to Railways.
Controller Spence suggested in reply that the interest and co-operation of the municipalities would be an inducement to the railways.

The chairman thought the committee would be able to show the railway commission that there was unfair discrimination against Toronto in favor of Montreal. A comparison of the time tables would show this. He strongly supported the idea of organizing the

RECORD-GROW ATTEND CONSERVATIVE PICNIC

Nearly Ten Thousand People at Jackson's Point—Great Enthusiasm Manifested.

JACKSON'S POINT, July 21.—(Special.)—Weather conditions, however adverse, cannot damp the ardor of North York Conservatives, neither does it serve materially to diminish the attendance at the annual picnic, as was abundantly evidenced in the rally here to-day.

The morning broke dark and lowering, with a steady downpour, which showed no disposition to let us until noon, but with all these discouragements a careful estimate places the number present in the park this afternoon at fully 10,000.

From every quarter of the historic old riding they flocked to a central point and that the picnic grounds. It was a glad some celebration, and demonstrated beyond all cavil the warm spot that "Herb" Lennox, M.L.A., holds in the hearts of his constituents.

The 12th Regiment of Newmarket and the Sutton bands were much in evidence and furnished delightful music throughout the day. On the arrival of the G.R.R. train from Toronto Hon. Frank Cochrane, M.L.A.; Hon. J. J. Foy, M.L.A.; R. G. Cowan, M.L.A., were met and escorted to the grounds, the procession extending over half a mile and numbering two or three thousand. Luncheon was served, and a platform meeting presided over by Archie McCallum, president North York Conservative Association, followed.

All the addresses were couched in a happy vein, as became the victors, in a hard fought fight, and all were likened to the military heroes of the day. Attorney-General Foy, who spoke briefly, drew attention to the call to arms issued by the eminent Q.C., T. C. Robbette, in The Globe, on July 19. "I recall," said Hon. Mr. Foy, "a young Liberal club that was formed some years ago, and The Globe of to-day is very interesting in the fact that many of the names referred to by Mr. Robbette were prominent herewith, and have since attained to lucrative offices in the gift of the government, showing that they at least have not labored in vain. Law reform and many other reforms would be interesting by reason of the accession to power of the Conservative government."

T. Herb Lennox got a reception that made the walk in, and in the course of a short and happy out-impassioned address gave the call to the North York Liberals, with respect to the matter of forest reserves, all and sundry to show cause.

He paid a warm tribute to R. R. Geaney, M.L.A., bestowed a few benedictions on the progressive ladies present, and closed with a short peroration which roused the enthusiasm of his followers to a high pitch. "Four years of Conservative rule have shown that the people of Ontario appreciate clear, honest administration," said R. R. Geaney, "and as long as we get the progressive legislation enacted and the Conservative party will remain in power. Mr. Geaney referred in ringing terms to the decision of the Dominion Government to prepare a voters' list for the unorganized portions of New Ontario, refusing to accept the Ontario lists, and at the same time adopting those of the provincial government in the Province of Quebec."

"Ask the hon. the minister of justice for the hon. he confides so in the famous and insolent line of procedure," said Mr. Geaney.

Hon. Frank Cochrane, who spoke briefly along practical lines, drew attention to the need for re-forestation, the building of trunk lines and branch lines to develop New Ontario, and pointed out the need for a voters' list, and the attention of the government to the unorganized portions of New Ontario.

Alex. McCowan, M.L.A., bore tribute to the worth of the member for North York.

On his return about 10:30 p.m., Mr. Cutts was horrified to find his wife in bed almost unconscious, and a heavy smell of chloroform in the room. THE FRENCH IN ONTARIO.

Hon. Dr. Reaume Says No Census Can Do Them Justice.

Hon. Dr. Reaume, minister of public works for Ontario, has contributed to L'Evolution the following article on French-Canadians in Ontario. "The history of the French element in Ontario is identical with the history of colonization in America. At several times in the past considerable groups of French-Canadians have come from Quebec to settle in Ontario, but the camp-fires on the frontier have been burning since the time of our first missionaries and our gallant pioneers bore the glorious light of Christianity to the savages in distant regions. Here has been considerable accession of French influence and certainly society has gained the day. Whether coming or going, the French element has left its imprint on the institutions of the nation, its temperament and its race.

"After all, there are very few points of contact between the Canadian of French origin and his compatriot of British origin; one seems to supplement the other. The greatness of England (which the Canadian is not proud of) is surely due to this facility whereby she can assimilate the best qualities of the other nations with which she comes in contact. "If I may be permitted to assume the mantle of a prophet, I would say that Canada will always possess two languages, French and English, and that the French-Canadian is not proud of her? It is surely due to this facility whereby she can assimilate the best qualities of the other nations with which she comes in contact. "If I may be permitted to assume the mantle of a prophet, I would say that Canada will always possess two languages, French and English, and that the French-Canadian is not proud of her? It is surely due to this facility whereby she can assimilate the best qualities of the other nations with which she comes in contact.

"The eternal tendency of the Englishman to classify everything according to the French element of Ontario a proportion of only 10 per cent. of the population. That is inexact. Shortly I can prove it. I am a proven fact on the side of the French element. There are at least fifty names, certainly French, whereas those who bear them never dreamed that they were anything but English. Their big brown eyes, their black hair, their well rounded form and their graceful mien proclaim, moreover, their origin.

"Since the first day that Upper Canada, before even this part of the country, was so designated, there were at least a few Frenchmen settled all along the line of travel. Traces of these establishments are still visible along the lakes, in the northern part of the County of York and above all on the shores of Lake Ontario, Erie and Huron. The sons of these first colonists have in certain cases lost the memory of their ancestors, but even a superficial research will reveal their French origin. Ontario has many of these groups as the issue of marriages of French descent.

"No census can give us full justice in its report of our numbers and of our social influence in the province. When the census is taken, the French of French birth who were in the country at the time of the capitulation, after one hundred and fifty years have attained a population of one million, in Canada and the United States, we can then form some idea of the result of the establishment of some thousands of French in Ontario, which was one hundred and fifty years ago the western part of Quebec."

ST. JAMES' PALACE. St. James' Palace is undoubtedly the most important place of residence for a distinguished visitor from the King and the country delight to honor. For, altho by a constitutional principle the King carries his court with him wherever he goes, St. James' is the well established official palace of the monarch and the residence of his court, and the place from which all the most important acts of state are dated. It is to the "Court of St. James" also that all foreign ambassadors are accredited, and here the King still holds his levees, altho the drawing rooms have since the death of the prince consort been invariably held at Buckingham Palace. The palace was built by Henry VIII on the site of a hospital dedicated to St. James, but very little of this building is left except the brick gateway facing St. James-street, and the old presence chamber, on the chimney piece of which can be seen the initials H. A. (Henry and Anne Boleyn). After the destruction by fire of Whitehall Palace, in the reign of William III, and until the occupation of Buckingham Palace by George IV, St. James' was the only residential London Palace of our sovereigns, the Palace of Westminster being abandoned as a royal residence from the time of Henry VIII.

AN EXPLANATION. "How long has this restaurant been open?" asked the would-be diner. "Two years," said the proprietor. "I'm sorry I did not know it," said the guest. "It should be better off if I had come here then." "Yes," smiled the proprietor, very much pleased in that. "I should probably have been served by this time if I had," said the guest, and the entire cordial vanished.—Harper's Weekly.
