Champion Had Slight Fracture of Joint of Finger in Third Round That Went to Challenger - Two Rounds Were Even -Madison Square Gardens Packed.

NEW YORK, March 25 .- Jess Willard, champion heavyweight of the world, easily outpointed Frank Moran in a tenround bout here tonight. Willard had a margin on points in every round except the third, which went to Moran by a narrow shave, and the eighth and ninth, margin on points in every round except the third, which went to Moran by a narrow shave, and the eighth and ninth, which were even.

The conqueror of Jack Johnson claimed to have broken bones in the back of his right hand during a slashing rally in the third, and it was noticeable that he did not use his right to any extent in the later rounds. Occasionally he uppercut to Moran's body or jaw with that hand, but it lacked the punishing power shown in his training work. The break was a fracture of a bone in the index finger.

The chief feature of Moran's battle was his gameness. Altho he could make no impression on Willard with his hardest swings, he fought steadily and courage-ously under a fusillade of left jabs and hooks, which battered his face and almost closed his left eye towards the end of the bout. Several times Moran was dazed by the champion's smashes, but Willard, fighting with his usual lack of aggressiveness, did not appear to try particularly for a knockout.

The champion never was in danger from Moran's blows, altho a number landed with crashing force on his faw and body. Most of them, however, either were blocked or avoided by the Kansas cowboy, who took full advantage of his great height and extraordinary reach.

Referee Charley White said after the bout it was one of the cleanest at which he ever officiated, and that he had to caution the boxers only once. Moran landed dangerously low on Willard at one time in infighting, but the blow was unintentional and did not appear to distress Willard seriously.

The crowd which witnessed the bout was the largest that has ever seen a glove contest here. The Garden from the floor to the upper gallery was jammed until there was hardly room to stand. Altho women spectators were encouraged to see the bout, few responded, and not more than 200 of them were seen about in the arena boxes. Well-known men in all walks of New York life, however, were grouped about in evening clothes, and gave the boxing match as much tone as a night at the opera. A few of the women spectators wore evening clothes, but the greater part of them were clad in the smart new spring suits, which fill all the city's finery shops.

Moran worked industriously in the second session, boring in and trying to land overhand swings, either right or left, while the big fellow jabbed him hard and hooked a short right to the head. Moran found great difficulty in reaching the champion, but was persistent, taking several stiff lefts in the face, one of which cut his right eye.

The third, and only round in which Moran had the advantage, opened with the Pittsburger landing a hard left on the body. Willard sent his right with full force to Moran's ribs, and put a straight left on the latter's nose. Frank rushed in again with three swings, landing his right three times overhand on the head, but he did not seem to be hurting the cowboy. Moran then swung his right to the body, and, rushing in again, with his head down, swung his left to the head, following with a right to the other side of the head.

Moran's Best Round.

Willard held him away again with his long left jabs, but Moran got in close with both hands. This was Moran's best round, and after the bout was over his advantage was explained by Willard's manager, who stated that Jess had broken some bones in his right hand during this round. If Willard met with an accident he did not show it, as he used his right occasionally, but not forcefully, during the next three rounds.

In the final session the champion kept working left jabs to the face, planting six of them without a return, altho Moran was trying hard to land an overhand blow. Rickard said after the fight: "Moran put up a good fight. He's a darn good boy. Willard was much slower than I thought he'd be. If he broke his right hand, as it is said he claimed he did, it did not make much difference. He didn't seem to need his right a good part of the time."

The second preliminary was another four-rounder, which called into action Young Marquard, 126 pounds, of New York, and Red Mack, 123, of Newark. Marquard was the victor. He scored a knockdown in the final round.

Jimmie Murray of New York and Charlie Treybell of Chicago mixed it in the third four-round preliminary at 119 pounds. Murray had the fight all his own way until the third round, when he lost it by fouling the Chicagoan.

The fourth preliminary was called off, so as to bring Moran and Willard into the ring as soon as possible. The semifinal was put on at 8.50, and was for six rounds, with Battling Levinsky opposing Jim Savage. Levinsky weighed 179 and Savage, 102½. Savage made a miscrable showing.

Jess Willard was the first to enter the ring. He jumped thru the ropes at 9.40, accompanied by his manager, Tom Jones. Willard wore a heavy green bathrobe over his maroon tights.

The applause that greeted Willard was surprisingly small. It was scattered and not prolonged. Willard and Jones faced a battery of cameras in the centre of the ring.

Just as the photographers had snapped the champion and his manager. Moran followed by his retinue of sparring partners hove into sight. The crowd broke out in wild tunult and gave the blonde Pittsburger a tremendous ovation. Moran also wore a heavy bathrobe over his pale green tights, thru which was entwined a small American flag.

After Moran and Willard had been photographed together, they went to their respective corners and received final instructions from their handlers. In Moran's corner were Willie Lewis, Bill McKinnon. Barclay Madden and Frank Kendall. The Willard seconds were Jack Hemple, Walter Monahan and Tom Jones.

The timekeepers for the occasion were Dr. George Murth for the state boxing commission, Ed. Welss for Willard, and George Considing for Moran.

Joe Humphrey then assumed the task of introducing the champions of other days. Jim Corbett came first and received a fine greeting. Bob Fitzsimmons, in faultless attire, followed.

Woman Scribe Waited In Vain for Knockout

NEW YORK, March 26.—One of The Herald's woman reporters went to the fight at Madison Square Garden last night. It was my first prize fight, and I sup-posed it was going to be brutal, she wroted instead of that, the spectacle afforded a wonderful lesson in kindness and forebearance.

Jess Willard toyed with Moran as gent-y as if he had been a pet kitten. Most of the time he only tickled him under the hin or slapped him lightly on the shoul-When he did land a few hard pokes he

When he did land a few hard pokes he immediately softened the blows by slipping an arm gently around Moran's shoulders and patting him softly. His attitude thruout the engagement was that of a kind parent who spanks an erring child and then presents the punished off-spring with a nickel.

Then the preliminary bouts began. Nice, pink young men, with dimples in their shoulders, came out of the gray, smoky background of the Ganden's immensity, and, slipping under the ropes, began tapping each other prettily. It seemed to me that the referee had much the hardest part of the preliminaries, for he not only had to watch both fighters all the time, but he had to pull them apart by main strength at intervals. The bouts were really interesting and attractive, and there was nothing nearly as brutal as football.

there was nothing nearly as brutal as football.

Then came many introductions of old fighters to the waiting audience. Corbett, Fitzsimmons, Kid McCoy, and finally John L. Sullivan climbed up on the square roped in platform on which the bouts took place. Each made his bow to the great audience, which gave them a hand for old times' sake. Then they stepped down again and left the stage to Willard and Moran.

All thru the ten rounds we were waiting and longing for a knockout. Surely it seemed that great, tall, strong Willard would stop petting Moran pretty soon and throw him down in sheer boredom. But his patience with his little friend seemed inexhaustible. Whenever Moran got too tired to fight any longer Willard would back him up against the ropes so that he could rest awhile.

Then he would gently lead him out into the middle of the ring so that everybody could see that he was all right and the fighting would begin again.

could see that he was all right and the fighting would begin again.

Beautiful and interesting as the fight was, I decided that it wasn't exactly exciting. The next time I am looking for something thrilling I will go to see Geraldine Farrar put it over Caruso.

LEVINSKY BELIEVES IN PRESENT TACTICS

Tells Why He Doesn't Use His Right, and Reason Sounds Well.

NEW YORK, March 25.—"I have been asked why I don't use my right hand more in the ring," said Battling Levinasked why I don't use my right hand more in the ring," said Battling Levinsky recently.

"I can answer them all at one full swoop. A man who tries to cross with his right every few minutes doesn't stay in the record books very long. Tossing your right at a man's chin is just like tossing dice. Sometimes you win, but most times you lose. The percentage is against you all the time. I've done pretty well with my lone left, haven't I? I've got nearly $30,000 in the bank and own a lot of property in Bridgeport, drive my own car and have only an invalid ear to show the line of business I'm in. Let me tell you something. I've been fighting all the largest men in the ring, and fifty to seventy-five pounds handicap has been nothing so far.

"The men I have met are all dangerous hitters and what would be the sense of me crossing with my right to take the chance of having them beat me to it? I'm only twenty-three years old and haven't attained my full growth as yet. What I'm alming at is to wait until I get as big as the rest of them. Then and only then will I go in there and trade right-handers. I don't want to be knocked out before my time.

"If I tried right hand punches I'd get it sooner or later. It can't be done during a successful career. Terry Mc-Govern traded rights and lost the toss. Ketchell tried to nail Papke with a right early in the Los Angeles fight and Papke beat him to it and brought him down for a world's title. I don't want to be knocked out before I've grown as large as Nature intended I should be. When I'm able to stand up and swap punches with men somewhat near my size I'll gamble rights with them, and not before. I go along winning all the time, so why should I change my plans just because the fans would like to see me lying on my back listening to the mocking birds? Cross my right? Not until I'm a great big boy."

YANKEES NOT AFRAID OF GREAT W. JOHNSON

Donovan's Tribe of Clouters Exnect to Hammer Wasnington Marvel.

NEW YORK, March 25.—The fact that Walter Johnson is sure to be the opposing twirler in the Yankees' first game of the 1916 season does not appear to be causing any great concern among the Donovan boys. Hark to one of the Yan-Donovan boys. Hark to one of the rankee veterans:
"They sent Walter against us a few times last year, and I guess we did no worse than break even, in fact, I think we won more than we lost. Slim Caldwell can always give Johnson a great argument, and he will have Frank Baker to oppose in his next attempt to down us. You know old Baker always hit well against the Washington marvel, better than he hit against some other pitchers not so well known. The bigger they come the harder they fall. Bring on your Johnson."
