RAVAGES OF FOREST FIRES.

Timber Lost Annually Would Build Homes for City of 400,000.

Every year forest fires in the United States destroy or damage sufficient timber to build houses for the entire population of a city of the size of Washington, D. C.; New Orleans, Denver or San Francisco, according to a statement issued by the Forest Service, United States Department of Agriculture, through "Safeguarding America Against Fire," the official bulletin of the National Board of Fire Underwriters. The area burned over each year, it is said, is equal to a strip ten miles wide, reaching from New York City to Denver.
