Then there was the staff car, huxurious as staff cars should be, built in beautiful stream lines, with the sides concaved in the interests of speed. The driver and his companion almost lay on the bottom. In the back was a folding writing table fittings. A new kind of oils feed by means of an endless chain of cups interests Canadian machinists and engineers. A mere bullet had caught the car in retreat and punctured the radiator. The attempt to plug the wound had failed under the strain of avoiding the rushing Canadians. The water in the radiator was still warm when the new owners arrived on the scene.

BIG LOT OF BOOTY

The radiator was still warm when the new owners arrived on the scene.

A Canadian division headquarters experimented for a week or so with five German bicycles that fell into their hands in running order at Guillencourt. They were satisfactory as experiments, but not practical luxuries compared with the orthodox bicycles known to us. In the shortage of rubber in Germany the tire consisted of steel springs bound round with a solid steel band, on which a strip of leather was rivetted to prevent slipping. In addition to a lack of elasticity was the danger of the tire turning over in rounding corners at speed. And army custom is against slowing down at corners.

At Rosieres was a large piece of machinery which turned out to be a periscope with a telescopic range of twenty-five miles. Since it required three mento handle it, there was no place for it but the museum.

Of active war material there was abundance not usually encountered. There the anti-tank rifle first came into use by the German. It is a clumsy looking overgrown rifle about six feet eaving their meals on cooking for their uccessors and of placing at convenient points the luxuries of an army well provided with material and unminded to ake the time to cart it away.

Down in the Amiens "show" the ground they never expected to relinquish his slide of peace was plentifully supplied with conveniences our boys knew now to appreciate. I have told of the quartermaster stores we captured, conaining everything from butter to boots, rom cigarettes to shirts. The boys recall those days with dreamy eyes.

barrel resembles a Luger pistol enclosed in an air-cooled cylinder. The feed is from the top through a circular clip holding thirty-two cartridges. The range is not great or the shooting accurate, but to a layman it seems to present possi-bilities. With it goes a metal case of six loaded clips and a filler, the empty clip being replaced in a second or two of a full one, much as the new clip is slid into the Mauser pistol. Fifteen cases of explosive bullets were part of the spoils. In the Arras fighting there was even a greater diversity of spoils. Up near Monchy the Germans were drilling two wells, when a shell of ours secured a direct bit on one. Two large dumps of rect hit on one. One village must have been a centre of German activity. At one end was a large ammunition dump, the plan of which adorns the walls of the officers' quarters beneath which is a heavily concreted cellar. These concrete walls and roofs, as well as the innumerable dugouts, so far behind the lines are plain proof of the efficacy of our bombing. At the other end of the same town is a cluster of feldlazaretts, or field hospitals, many of them still containing much of their fittings. In one is a good dental chair. The mattresses of all these hospitals thus far encountered were simply excelsior, and the filth of them puts an end for all time to any idea of German medical superiority.

A cluster of buildings served as a more elaborate hospital not far away.

Much will be returned to them—in tangible form via the guns.

Emerging from a deserted village I met a soldier leading a pair of rather disconsolate horses the Germans had left. He was dubious of them, as possible carriers of concealed weapons, but they were worth salvaging. At a battalion advanced headquarters within a mile of the Canal du Nord the waiters at the officers' mess appeared in starched white shirts with attached collars and cuffs and pleated fronts, of a vintage of half a century ago. Under shell fire they had rescued them for dress occasions. The officers were congratulating themselves over the addition to their vegetables that were intended for German consumption.

In one part is a pleasant little lake.
On its banks is a fine springboard for swimmers, and a boat for pleasure. Fish are there, for a sign in German forbids fishing with stick bombs. The officers were congratulating themselves over the addition to their larder of several hundredweight of flour, coffee beans, rice, potatoes, beans and other supplies. And from the gardens of the village came fresh tomatoes, pumpkins, cucumbers, beans, and other "fruit in season." Two of the first artillery officers I met in the district were bent beneath sandbags filled with fresh vegetables that were intended for Ger-

In the advance part of the satisfaction is the recovery of stores and munitions and munitions they themselves need so much. When an officer drops his belt, Rhine will fail to satisfy that call.

Your Safest Guide to Value

N buying shoes, unless you yourself are an expert, you must take somebody's word for value in them. Price alone is not a safe guide, for prices today are determined by such a broad sweep of abnormal conditions. The "looks" of the shoe will not assure you of value, for its wearing qualities are mostly invisible.

You will seldom be led astray if you will go to a reliable dealer and benefit by his advice based on knowledge and experience. If in addition you will see that the manufacturer's trade-mark is on the shoes you buy, you will have double assurance of service and

The manufacturer's trade-mark is a direct guarantee to you of shoe quality at fair prices, and it is the strongest possible endorsement of your dealer's judgment of values. It is your safest guide to service and economy.
