

ALEXANDRA TEMPLE
HOLDS CELEBRATION

54th Anniversary Observed
—Ladies' Auxiliary Presents $100 Gift.

The 54th anniversary of Alexandra Temple, No. 6, T. of H. and T., held last evening in Temple Hall, Main street, proved a successful event. The hall was well filled and the programme was an excellent one. Two who were present at the first anniversary of the lodge, Mrs. Brown and J. B. Eagles, one of the charter members, were present last night.

One of the interesting items on the programme was the presentation to the Temple of $100, a birthday gift from the ladies' auxiliary. The presentation was made by W. F. Roberts, president of the auxiliary, and the thanks of the Temple was extended by G. R. Andrews, chief trustee.

G. R. Andrews presided, and had on the platform with him J. B. Eagles, "Father of the Lodge," and S. E. Logan, supreme vice-temple. At the conclusion of the programme, refreshments were served and later the younger members and their friends enjoyed a dance.

PERSIA CRISIS

Anti-Monarchists Demonstrations Lead to Disorders in the Capital.

Tehran, Persia, March 21.—Anti-monarchist demonstrations led to disorders throughout the capital yesterday. They were delivered by the leaders of the opposition to the present Shah but the people remained apathetic.

Business was suspended while the meetings were in progress. Later addresses in favor of the establishment of a republic were delivered. The business houses and bazaars were re-opened, but the anti-royalists immediately attempted to close them by force, and the resulting disorders the people fled to the mosque for safety.

It is reported that the Crown Prince has been warned to leave the Palace and that the ladies of the royal household have already fled.

Members of the Progressive party who are agitating for the establishment of a republic attempted to force the issue in parliament but adjournment was taken without arriving at a decision.

CONTINUE WORK

Fear Grows That 18 Men Imprisoned on Jap Submarine.

Tokio, March 21.—Although rescue work was continued, the fear grew today that 18 survivors imprisoned in the after compartment of the Japanese navy submarine, which was lost 26 fathoms deep on the ocean bottom off Sasebo since Wednesday, have succumbed to suffocation. Signals from the interior have ceased.

Attempts to raise the stern of the vessel having failed, it is planned to tow it to shallow water. Twenty-six men for the crew drowned in the forward compartment after a collision with a warship and it appears that the remaining 18 have been smothered in the four air of their cramped quarters.

NOTICES OF BIRTHS, MARRIAGES AND DEATHS, 50 CENTS.

BIRTHS

BOYCE—On March 20, 1924, to Dr. and Mrs. A. J. Boyce, a son, James M. MCMASTER—On March 20, 1924, to Mr. and Mrs. C. A. McMaster, a daughter.

DEATHS

MANNING—In this city, on March 21, Thomas Manning, of this city, leaving two sons and four daughters to mourn.

MARCH—At his residence, 73 St. David street, on March 21, 1924, James M. March, leaving one wife and one daughter to mourn.

FUNERAL ON SUNDAY from his late residence at 120 B. M. Service at St. Mary's church at 2 o'clock.

JONES—On Thursday, March 20, at her late residence, in Brookton, Mass., Mary J. Jones, formerly of St. John, leaving a sister and two brothers to mourn.

IN MEMORIAM

CAPTAIN—In sad and loving memory of Natalie Captain, who suddenly passed to rest March 20, 1922.

You're not forgotten, Daddy, Dear, Nor will you ever be. As long as life and memory last We will remember thee.

FUNERAL NOTICE

The Officers and Members of New Brunswick Lodge No. 1, Knights of Pythias, are invited to attend the funeral of our late Brother, JAMES M. MARCH.

Meet at his late residence, 73 St. David street, at 1:30 o'clock on Sunday afternoon to go to St. Mary's Church service at 2 o'clock.

Members of sister lodges invited to attend. Ordinary dress. By order of C. C. JAMES E. ARTHURS, Keeper of Records and Seals. 284-4-24

GREEN'S DINING HALL

BREAKFAST King Squeeze 60c
DINNER 60c
SUPPER 60c
Noon, 12-2:30 P. M., 5-8 12-27-1924

Says Jury Duty Too Unclean For Women

Boston, March 21.—Jury duty is too unclean a job for women, Judge Frederick W. Fielding of the Massachusetts Superior Court told members of the town Down Club at Unity House recently.

Body of Fredericton Boy Is Recovered From Battlefield

William E. Parsons Was Killed at Hill 70—Buried in Shellhole.

A leather identification disc and a signet ring are the means by which the remains of Lance Corporal Wm. E. Parsons of Fredericton, who was killed in action on the morning of August 15, 1917, just as he was "going over the top" at Hill 70, have been identified after almost seven years, says the Gleaner.

The articles identified were found during the past few weeks by the Graves Registration officers searching through the battle areas of France for isolated graves.

Mrs. John Parsons, mother of the dead soldier, received from Ottawa this week a leather disc which was almost completely ruined by its contact with the earth and on which the only recognizable mark was the number 708189, and a signet ring with the initials "W. E." on the shield and the inscription "May 10th, 1916" on the inside. These were found upon the body of the soldier in an isolated part of the battlefield, where he had been hidden the morning he was caught by a sniper, in the hope that he was not extinct and that stretcher bearers coming from the rear would find him and take him to the base hospital.

He was killed outright and his body remained where it was placed almost seven years ago, until a short time ago.

The letter accompanying the ring and disc said the remains had been found and reverently removed and re-buried in Grave 21, Row "C," Plot 6, Rue Petillon Military cemetery, Fleurbaix, four miles southwest of Arras, France. The grave is marked by a temporary wooden memorial which will at some future date be replaced by a permanent stone monument.

Lance Corporal Parsons went over with the 104th Battalion, together with his father, John Parsons, and his brother, John Parsons, Jr. The father returned safely home after war service, but the two sons made the supreme sacrifice, the younger being wounded on the morning of May 31, 1918, and dying the same day, and the other being killed August 16, 1917.

Another brother, Edward, went overseas with the 56th Battalion when only 16 years of age, and was badly wounded.

CADETS RECEIVE CASH PRIZES

Sixteen members of the various Cadet Corps in the city are richer by $5 as a result of their proficiency in semaphore signalling in the tests recently conducted by Sergeant Wallace.

The boys had to make a percentage of 95 in order to qualify for the bonus and they are being warmly congratulated on their success.

Following are the names of the boys and the corps to which they belong: Albert school, Walter Worden, Calvin Jackson, Ralph Waddington, Fenwick Craft, Harrison Ellis and Frank Kelly; St. Andrew's, John Allan, Fred Jones, Robert Franklin; St. John the Baptist, Gerald McPeak; King Edward, Gordon Simonson; Fairville, Louis Allan, LeBaron McKel, Ronald Linton, Percy McKim and Andrew Gordon.

Robert Franklin is a son of Clyde Franklin of the F. James Carroll Playhouse, and he has only been in the Cadets since coming here last fall.

HUNGARY GETS TWO VILLAGES

Budapest, Feb. 28.—(By mail)—The villages of Somokoe Ujfal, and Somokoe, on the Czech frontier, have been formally handed over to the Hungarian authorities by Czecho-slovakia. They were assigned to Hungary by the League of Nations last year.

Arrangements have been made for the showing of "The Dramatic Life of Abraham Lincoln" aboard the Leif Ericson on its trip to England early in April. The showing will be given for the benefit of the Seaman's Fund.

OH, GIRLS!

London, March 21.—Hilarity 4at traceable to liquor, according to a report of government experts, just issued. This report, contends that liquor taken in successive doses by persons who are in quiet surroundings gradually produces not exuberant but sleepiness.

The reason phases of excitement at big dinners can be accounted for by the exciting influences of avianment, jovial company, bright lights and unrestrained talk and song," according to the report.

One of the surest antidotes against intoxication, according to this report of the committee investigating the effects of alcohol, is the big glass of milk before imbibing spirits, beer or wine.

Milk Proves a Good "Jag" Preventative

London, March 21.—Hilarity 4at traceable to liquor, according to a report of government experts, just issued. This report, contends that liquor taken in successive doses by persons who are in quiet surroundings gradually produces not exuberant but sleepiness.

"Byng" Plays Havoc With Party Dainties

"Byng" is a dog. "Byng" heretofore has not displayed any signs of fastidiousness regarding diet but evidences of his epicurean tastes recently have been displayed.

The story runs thus: A day or two ago Byng's master paid a visit to relatives accompanied by his trusty canine. Upon arrival at his destination he seated himself and became engaged in genial converse with members of his family. "Byng," being temporarily relieved of his duties as guardian, embarked upon a tour of investigation of the premises.

After sundry pokings and sniffings around the yard and woodshed, a delectable odor assailed his nostrils. He drew a deeper breath, and guided by his sense of smell made his way upstairs and beheld what was undoubtedly the most tempting feast ever set before him.

A bridge party was to be given that evening by the family in the upper part of the house, and the housekeeper had exerted all her cunning in preparation of a dainty salad with which to tempt the appetites of her guests. Twenty-two plates had already been decorated and set out in gala array in the back kitchen. Crisp pastry cases, encased in succulent lettuce leaves enclosed a toothsome concoction of chopped meat, dressing, jelly cubes and what not.

It was this display that burst in all its splendor upon "Byng's" vision. In the parlance of the old time novelists, "amazement, delight, anticipation and determination chased themselves in rapid succession over his expressive countenance."

It is to be questioned whether he had ever really heard of Lucullus and his banquets, but if he had, he doubtless thought that the centuries had rolled back and he was confronted with one of the famous old Roman feasts. Opportunity knocks only once at every dog's door and our hero was not one to let it find him napping. He was expected to demolish 16 of the above mentioned dainties in about 30 many seconds. Sixteen empty plates and six full ones were all that remained to give testimony of the labors of the morning.

When the housekeeper arrived on the scene and gazed upon the havoc that had been wrought, words were indeed inadequate to express her feelings, but "Byng" had meanwhile departed for his "ain freside," smacking his lips and no doubt soliloquizing upon the extraordinary piece of good luck that had fallen his lot. He may perchance have cherished a notion of paying another visit in the near future, but needless to say his welcome may be somewhat lacking in cordiality.

When the housekeeper arrived on the scene and gazed upon the havoc that had been wrought, words were indeed inadequate to express her feelings, but "Byng" had meanwhile departed for his "ain freside," smacking his lips and no doubt soliloquizing upon the extraordinary piece of good luck that had fallen his lot. He may perchance have cherished a notion of paying another visit in the near future, but needless to say his welcome may be somewhat lacking in cordiality.

When the housekeeper arrived on the scene and gazed upon the havoc that had been wrought, words were indeed inadequate to express her feelings, but "Byng" had meanwhile departed for his "ain freside," smacking his lips and no doubt soliloquizing upon the extraordinary piece of good luck that had fallen his lot. He may perchance have cherished a notion of paying another visit in the near future, but needless to say his welcome may be somewhat lacking in cordiality.

When the housekeeper arrived on the scene and gazed upon the havoc that had been wrought, words were indeed inadequate to express her feelings, but "Byng" had meanwhile departed for his "ain freside," smacking his lips and no doubt soliloquizing upon the extraordinary piece of good luck that had fallen his lot. He may perchance have cherished a notion of paying another visit in the near future, but needless to say his welcome may be somewhat lacking in cordiality.

When the housekeeper arrived on the scene and gazed upon the havoc that had been wrought, words were indeed inadequate to express her feelings, but "Byng" had meanwhile departed for his "ain freside," smacking his lips and no doubt soliloquizing upon the extraordinary piece of good luck that had fallen his lot. He may perchance have cherished a notion of paying another visit in the near future, but needless to say his welcome may be somewhat lacking in cordiality.

When the housekeeper arrived on the scene and gazed upon the havoc that had been wrought, words were indeed inadequate to express her feelings, but "Byng" had meanwhile departed for his "ain freside," smacking his lips and no doubt soliloquizing upon the extraordinary piece of good luck that had fallen his lot. He may perchance have cherished a notion of paying another visit in the near future, but needless to say his welcome may be somewhat lacking in cordiality.

When the housekeeper arrived on the scene and gazed upon the havoc that had been wrought, words were indeed inadequate to express her feelings, but "Byng" had meanwhile departed for his "ain freside," smacking his lips and no doubt soliloquizing upon the extraordinary piece of good luck that had fallen his lot. He may perchance have cherished a notion of paying another visit in the near future, but needless to say his welcome may be somewhat lacking in cordiality.

When the housekeeper arrived on the scene and gazed upon the havoc that had been wrought, words were indeed inadequate to express her feelings, but "Byng" had meanwhile departed for his "ain freside," smacking his lips and no doubt soliloquizing upon the extraordinary piece of good luck that had fallen his lot. He may perchance have cherished a notion of paying another visit in the near future, but needless to say his welcome may be somewhat lacking in cordiality.

When the housekeeper arrived on the scene and gazed upon the havoc that had been wrought, words were indeed inadequate to express her feelings, but "Byng" had meanwhile departed for his "ain freside," smacking his lips and no doubt soliloquizing upon the extraordinary piece of good luck that had fallen his lot. He may perchance have cherished a notion of paying another visit in the near future, but needless to say his welcome may be somewhat lacking in cordiality.

When the housekeeper arrived on the scene and gazed upon the havoc that had been wrought, words were indeed inadequate to express her feelings, but "Byng" had meanwhile departed for his "ain freside," smacking his lips and no doubt soliloquizing upon the extraordinary piece of good luck that had fallen his lot. He may perchance have cherished a notion of paying another visit in the near future, but needless to say his welcome may be somewhat lacking in cordiality.

When the housekeeper arrived on the scene and gazed upon the havoc that had been wrought, words were indeed inadequate to express her feelings, but "Byng" had meanwhile departed for his "ain freside," smacking his lips and no doubt soliloquizing upon the extraordinary piece of good luck that had fallen his lot. He may perchance have cherished a notion of paying another visit in the near future, but needless to say his welcome may be somewhat lacking in cordiality.

When the housekeeper arrived on the scene and gazed upon the havoc that had been wrought, words were indeed inadequate to express her feelings, but "Byng" had meanwhile departed for his "ain freside," smacking his lips and no doubt soliloquizing upon the extraordinary piece of good luck that had fallen his lot. He may perchance have cherished a notion of paying another visit in the near future, but needless to say his welcome may be somewhat lacking in cordiality.

When the housekeeper arrived on the scene and gazed upon the havoc that had been wrought, words were indeed inadequate to express her feelings, but "Byng" had meanwhile departed for his "ain freside," smacking his lips and no doubt soliloquizing upon the extraordinary piece of good luck that had fallen his lot. He may perchance have cherished a notion of paying another visit in the near future, but needless to say his welcome may be somewhat lacking in cordiality.

When the housekeeper arrived on the scene and gazed upon the havoc that had been wrought, words were indeed inadequate to express her feelings, but "Byng" had meanwhile departed for his "ain freside," smacking his lips and no doubt soliloquizing upon the extraordinary piece of good luck that had fallen his lot. He may perchance have cherished a notion of paying another visit in the near future, but needless to say his welcome may be somewhat lacking in cordiality.

When the housekeeper arrived on the scene and gazed upon the havoc that had been wrought, words were indeed inadequate to express her feelings, but "Byng" had meanwhile departed for his "ain freside," smacking his lips and no doubt soliloquizing upon the extraordinary piece of good luck that had fallen his lot. He may perchance have cherished a notion of paying another visit in the near future, but needless to say his welcome may be somewhat lacking in cordiality.

When the housekeeper arrived on the scene and gazed upon the havoc that had been wrought, words were indeed inadequate to express her feelings, but "Byng" had meanwhile departed for his "ain freside," smacking his lips and no doubt soliloquizing upon the extraordinary piece of good luck that had fallen his lot. He may perchance have cherished a notion of paying another visit in the near future, but needless to say his welcome may be somewhat lacking in cordiality.

When the housekeeper arrived on the scene and gazed upon the havoc that had been wrought, words were indeed inadequate to express her feelings, but "Byng" had meanwhile departed for his "ain freside," smacking his lips and no doubt soliloquizing upon the extraordinary piece of good luck that had fallen his lot. He may perchance have cherished a notion of paying another visit in the near future, but needless to say his welcome may be somewhat lacking in cordiality.

When the housekeeper arrived on the scene and gazed upon the havoc that had been wrought, words were indeed inadequate to express her feelings, but "Byng" had meanwhile departed for his "ain freside," smacking his lips and no doubt soliloquizing upon the extraordinary piece of good luck that had fallen his lot. He may perchance have cherished a notion of paying another visit in the near future, but needless to say his welcome may be somewhat lacking in cordiality.

When the housekeeper arrived on the scene and gazed upon the havoc that had been wrought, words were indeed inadequate to express her feelings, but "Byng" had meanwhile departed for his "ain freside," smacking his lips and no doubt soliloquizing upon the extraordinary piece of good luck that had fallen his lot. He may perchance have cherished a notion of paying another visit in the near future, but needless to say his welcome may be somewhat lacking in cordiality.

When the housekeeper arrived on the scene and gazed upon the havoc that had been wrought, words were indeed inadequate to express her feelings, but "Byng" had meanwhile departed for his "ain freside," smacking his lips and no doubt soliloquizing upon the extraordinary piece of good luck that had fallen his lot. He may perchance have cherished a notion of paying another visit in the near future, but needless to say his welcome may be somewhat lacking in cordiality.

When the housekeeper arrived on the scene and gazed upon the havoc that had been wrought, words were indeed inadequate to express her feelings, but "Byng" had meanwhile departed for his "ain freside," smacking his lips and no doubt soliloquizing upon the extraordinary piece of good luck that had fallen his lot. He may perchance have cherished a notion of paying another visit in the near future, but needless to say his welcome may be somewhat lacking in cordiality.

When the housekeeper arrived on the scene and gazed upon the havoc that had been wrought, words were indeed inadequate to express her feelings, but "Byng" had meanwhile departed for his "ain freside," smacking his lips and no doubt soliloquizing upon the extraordinary piece of good luck that had fallen his lot. He may perchance have cherished a notion of paying another visit in the near future, but needless to say his welcome may be somewhat lacking in cordiality.

When the housekeeper arrived on the scene and gazed upon the havoc that had been wrought, words were indeed inadequate to express her feelings, but "Byng" had meanwhile departed for his "ain freside," smacking his lips and no doubt soliloquizing upon the extraordinary piece of good luck that had fallen his lot. He may perchance have cherished a notion of paying another visit in the near future, but needless to say his welcome may be somewhat lacking in cordiality.

When the housekeeper arrived on the scene and gazed upon the havoc that had been wrought, words were indeed inadequate to express her feelings, but "Byng" had meanwhile departed for his "ain freside," smacking his lips and no doubt soliloquizing upon the extraordinary piece of good luck that had fallen his lot. He may perchance have cherished a notion of paying another visit in the near future, but needless to say his welcome may be somewhat lacking in cordiality.

When the housekeeper arrived on the scene and gazed upon the havoc that had been wrought, words were indeed inadequate to express her feelings, but "Byng" had meanwhile departed for his "ain freside," smacking his lips and no doubt soliloquizing upon the extraordinary piece of good luck that had fallen his lot. He may perchance have cherished a notion of paying another visit in the near future, but needless to say his welcome may be somewhat lacking in cordiality.

When the housekeeper arrived on the scene and gazed upon the havoc that had been wrought, words were indeed inadequate to express her feelings, but "Byng" had meanwhile departed for his "ain freside," smacking his lips and no doubt soliloquizing upon the extraordinary piece of good luck that had fallen his lot. He may perchance have cherished a notion of paying another visit in the near future, but needless to say his welcome may be somewhat lacking in cordiality.

When the housekeeper arrived on the scene and gazed upon the havoc that had been wrought, words were indeed inadequate to express her feelings, but "Byng" had meanwhile departed for his "ain freside," smacking his lips and no doubt soliloquizing upon the extraordinary piece of good luck that had fallen his lot. He may perchance have cherished a notion of paying another visit in the near future, but needless to say his welcome may be somewhat lacking in cordiality.

When the housekeeper arrived on the scene and gazed upon the havoc that had been wrought, words were indeed inadequate to express her feelings, but "Byng" had meanwhile departed for his "ain freside," smacking his lips and no doubt soliloquizing upon the extraordinary piece of good luck that had fallen his lot. He may perchance have cherished a notion of paying another visit in the near future, but needless to say his welcome may be somewhat lacking in cordiality.

When the housekeeper arrived on the scene and gazed upon the havoc that had been wrought, words were indeed inadequate to express her feelings, but "Byng" had meanwhile departed for his "ain freside," smacking his lips and no doubt soliloquizing upon the extraordinary piece of good luck that had fallen his lot. He may perchance have cherished a notion of paying another visit in the near future, but needless to say his welcome may be somewhat lacking in cordiality.

When the housekeeper arrived on the scene and gazed upon the havoc that had been wrought, words were indeed inadequate to express her feelings, but "Byng" had meanwhile departed for his "ain freside," smacking his lips and no doubt soliloquizing upon the extraordinary piece of good luck that had fallen his lot. He may perchance have cherished a notion of paying another visit in the near future, but needless to say his welcome may be somewhat lacking in cordiality.

When the housekeeper arrived on the scene and gazed upon the havoc that had been wrought, words were indeed inadequate to express her feelings, but "Byng" had meanwhile departed for his "ain freside," smacking his lips and no doubt soliloquizing upon the extraordinary piece of good luck that had fallen his lot. He may perchance have cherished a notion of paying another visit in the near future, but needless to say his welcome may be somewhat lacking in cordiality.

When the housekeeper arrived on the scene and gazed upon the havoc that had been wrought, words were indeed inadequate to express her feelings, but "Byng" had meanwhile departed for his "ain freside," smacking his lips and no doubt soliloquizing upon the extraordinary piece of good luck that had fallen his lot. He may perchance have cherished a notion of paying another visit in the near future, but needless to say his welcome may be somewhat lacking in cordiality.

When the housekeeper arrived on the scene and gazed upon the havoc that had been wrought, words were indeed inadequate to express her feelings, but "Byng" had meanwhile departed for his "ain freside," smacking his lips and no doubt soliloquizing upon the extraordinary piece of good luck that had fallen his lot. He may perchance have cherished a notion of paying another visit in the near future, but needless to say his welcome may be somewhat lacking in cordiality.

When the housekeeper arrived on the scene and gazed upon the havoc that had been wrought, words were indeed inadequate to express her feelings, but "Byng" had meanwhile departed for his "ain freside," smacking his lips and no doubt soliloquizing upon the extraordinary piece of good luck that had fallen his lot. He may perchance have cherished a notion of paying another visit in the near future, but needless to say his welcome may be somewhat lacking in cordiality.

When the housekeeper arrived on the scene and gazed upon the havoc that had been wrought, words were indeed inadequate to express her feelings, but "Byng" had meanwhile departed for his "ain freside," smacking his lips and no doubt soliloquizing upon the extraordinary piece of good luck that had fallen his lot. He may perchance have cherished a notion of paying another visit in the near future, but needless to say his welcome may be somewhat lacking in cordiality.

When the housekeeper arrived on the scene and gazed upon the havoc that had been wrought, words were indeed inadequate to express her feelings, but "Byng" had meanwhile departed for his "ain freside," smacking his lips and no doubt soliloquizing upon the extraordinary piece of good luck that had fallen his lot. He may perchance have cherished a notion of paying another visit in the near future, but needless to say his welcome may be somewhat lacking in cordiality.

When the housekeeper arrived on the scene and gazed upon the havoc that had been wrought, words were indeed inadequate to express her feelings, but "Byng" had meanwhile departed for his "ain freside," smacking his lips and no doubt soliloquizing upon the extraordinary piece of good luck that had fallen his lot. He may perchance have cherished a notion of paying another visit in the near future, but needless to say his welcome may be somewhat lacking in cordiality.

When the housekeeper arrived on the scene and gazed upon the havoc that had been wrought, words were indeed inadequate to express her feelings, but "Byng" had meanwhile departed for his "ain freside," smacking his lips and no doubt soliloquizing upon the extraordinary piece of good luck that had fallen his lot. He may perchance have cherished a notion of paying another visit in the near future, but needless to say his welcome may be somewhat lacking in cordiality.

When the housekeeper arrived on the scene and gazed upon the havoc that had been wrought, words were indeed inadequate to express her feelings, but "Byng" had meanwhile departed for his "ain freside," smacking his lips and no doubt soliloquizing upon the extraordinary piece of good luck that had fallen his lot. He may perchance have cherished a notion of paying another visit in the near future, but needless to say his welcome may be somewhat lacking in cordiality.

When the housekeeper arrived on the scene and gazed upon the havoc that had been wrought, words were indeed inadequate to express her feelings, but "Byng" had meanwhile departed for his "ain freside," smacking his lips and no doubt soliloquizing upon the extraordinary piece of good luck that had fallen his lot. He may perchance have cherished a notion of paying another visit in the near future, but needless to say his welcome may be somewhat lacking in cordiality.

When the housekeeper arrived on the scene and gazed upon the havoc that had been wrought, words were indeed inadequate to express her feelings, but "Byng" had meanwhile departed for his "ain freside," smacking his lips and no doubt soliloquizing upon the extraordinary piece of good luck that had fallen his lot. He may perchance have cherished a notion of paying another visit in the near future, but needless to say his welcome may be somewhat lacking in cordiality.

When the housekeeper arrived on the scene and gazed upon the havoc that had been wrought, words were indeed inadequate to express her feelings, but "Byng" had meanwhile departed for his "ain freside," smacking his lips and no doubt soliloquizing upon the extraordinary piece of good luck that had fallen his lot. He may perchance have cherished a notion of paying another visit in the near future, but needless to say his welcome may be somewhat lacking in cordiality.

When the housekeeper arrived on the scene and gazed upon the havoc that had been wrought, words were indeed inadequate to express her feelings, but "Byng" had meanwhile departed for his "ain freside," smacking his lips and no doubt soliloquizing upon the extraordinary piece of good luck that had fallen his lot. He may perchance have cherished a notion of paying another visit in the near future, but needless to say his welcome may be somewhat lacking in cordiality.

When the housekeeper arrived on the scene and gazed upon the havoc that had been wrought, words were indeed inadequate to express her feelings, but "Byng" had meanwhile departed for his "ain freside," smacking his lips and no doubt soliloquizing upon the extraordinary piece of good luck that had fallen his lot. He may perchance have cherished a notion of paying another visit in the near future, but needless to say his welcome may be somewhat lacking in cordiality.

When the housekeeper arrived on the scene and gazed upon the havoc that had been wrought, words were indeed inadequate to express her feelings, but "Byng" had meanwhile departed for his "ain freside," smacking his lips and no doubt soliloquizing upon the extraordinary piece of good luck that had fallen his lot. He may perchance have cherished a notion of paying another visit in the near future, but needless to say his welcome may be somewhat lacking in cordiality.

When the housekeeper arrived on the scene and gazed upon the havoc that had been wrought, words were indeed inadequate to express her feelings, but "Byng" had meanwhile departed for his "ain freside," smacking his lips and no doubt soliloquizing upon the extraordinary piece of good luck that had fallen his lot. He may perchance have cherished a notion of paying another visit in the near future, but needless to say his welcome may be somewhat lacking in cordiality.

When the housekeeper arrived on the scene and gazed upon the havoc that had been wrought, words were indeed inadequate to express her feelings, but "Byng" had meanwhile departed for his "ain freside," smacking his lips and no doubt soliloquizing upon the extraordinary piece of good luck that had fallen his lot. He may perchance have cherished a notion of paying another visit in the near future, but needless to say his welcome may be somewhat lacking in cordiality.

When the housekeeper arrived on the scene and gazed upon the havoc that had been wrought, words were indeed inadequate to express her feelings, but "Byng" had meanwhile departed for his "ain freside," smacking his lips and no doubt soliloquizing upon the extraordinary piece of good luck that had fallen his lot. He may perchance have cherished a notion of paying another visit in the near future, but needless to say his welcome may be somewhat lacking in cordiality.

When the housekeeper arrived on the scene and gazed upon the havoc that had been wrought, words were indeed inadequate to express her feelings, but "Byng" had meanwhile departed for his "ain freside," smacking his lips and no doubt soliloquizing upon the extraordinary piece of good luck that had fallen his lot. He may perchance have cherished a notion of paying another visit in the near future, but needless to say his welcome may be somewhat lacking in cordiality.

When the housekeeper arrived on the scene and gazed upon the havoc that had been wrought, words were indeed inadequate to express her feelings, but "Byng" had meanwhile departed for his "ain freside," smacking his lips and no doubt soliloquizing upon the extraordinary piece of good luck that had fallen his lot. He may perchance have cherished a notion of paying another visit in the near future, but needless to say his welcome may be somewhat lacking in cordiality.

When the housekeeper arrived on the scene and gazed upon the havoc that had been wrought, words were indeed inadequate to express her feelings, but "Byng" had meanwhile departed for his "ain freside," smacking his lips and no doubt soliloquizing upon the extraordinary piece of good luck that had fallen his lot. He may perchance have cherished a notion of paying another visit in the near future, but needless to say his welcome may be somewhat lacking in cordiality.

When the housekeeper arrived on the scene and gazed upon the havoc that had been wrought, words were indeed inadequate to express her feelings, but "Byng" had meanwhile departed for his "ain freside," smacking his lips and no doubt soliloquizing upon the extraordinary piece of good luck that had fallen his lot. He may perchance have cherished a notion of paying another visit in the near future, but needless to say his welcome may be somewhat lacking in cordiality.

When the housekeeper arrived on the scene and gazed upon the havoc that had been wrought, words were indeed inadequate to express her feelings, but "Byng" had meanwhile departed for his "ain freside," smacking his lips and no doubt soliloquizing upon the extraordinary piece of good luck that had fallen his lot. He may perchance have cherished a notion of paying another visit in the near future, but needless to say his welcome may be somewhat lacking in cordiality.

When the housekeeper arrived on the scene and gazed upon the havoc that had been wrought, words were indeed inadequate to express her feelings, but "Byng" had meanwhile departed for his "ain freside," smacking his lips and no doubt soliloquizing upon the extraordinary piece of good luck that had fallen his lot. He may perchance have cherished a notion of paying another visit in the near future, but needless to say his welcome may be somewhat lacking in cordiality.

When the housekeeper arrived on the scene and gazed upon the havoc that had been wrought, words were indeed inadequate to express her feelings, but "Byng" had meanwhile departed for his "ain freside," smacking his lips and no doubt soliloquizing upon the extraordinary piece of good luck that had fallen his lot. He may perchance have cherished a notion of paying another visit in the near future, but needless to say his welcome may be somewhat lacking in cordiality.

When the housekeeper arrived on the scene and gazed upon the havoc that had been wrought, words were indeed inadequate to express her feelings, but "Byng" had meanwhile departed for his "ain freside," smacking his lips and no doubt soliloquizing upon the extraordinary piece of good luck that had fallen his lot. He may perchance have cherished a notion of paying another visit in the near future, but needless to say his welcome may be somewhat lacking in cordiality.

When the housekeeper arrived on the scene and gazed upon the havoc that had been wrought, words were indeed inadequate to express her feelings, but "Byng"