The Wretched Father.

Not long since, a wealthy merchant of Boston poured into the ear of a valued friend his bitter complaints of the conduct of his two and only sons. "My life is rendered perfectly miserable by their reckless dissipation and shameless profligacy," said he. The friend inquired of the merchant if he could bear plain dealing. "Yes" was the reply. "After what I have been made to suffer by those of my own household, I feel that I can bear anything from others." The friend laid his hand kindly upon the merchant's shoulder, and inquired, "Where did your children learn to drink intoxicating stimulants?" "In the most impassioned manner conceivable, the wretched man exclaimed, "At my own table and O, sir," said he, "that reflection is the most bitter drop in the draught I am compelled to drain." "Where on earth, with all his wealth, can that wretched father now find happiness?" He has thoughtlessly made his sons pass through the fire to our American Moloch, and the scorch and blasted victims will, in all probability, torment his vision, and wring his heart with anguish while he lives, to go before him to dishonored graves, dragging him with his load of sorrows after them.
