

QUEBEC.

CITY OF QUEBEC—CANADA EAST.

Associated as Quebec is with so many scenes of military glory, of success as well as defeat, it must at all times possess a peculiar interest to almost every one. On its fields, and around its battlements, some of the bravest of the sons of Great Britain and Ireland, America and France, have fallen, and around its citadel, some of the most daring exploits have taken place. Standing on a bold and precipitous promontory, Quebec has not inappropriately been called the "Gibraltar of America," with which the names of the brave Wolfe, Montcalm, and Montgomery must ever remain connected.

The citadel stands on what is called Cape Diamond, 350 feet above the level of the sea, and includes about 40 acres of ground. The view from off the citadel is of the most picturesque and grand character. There will be seen the majestic St. Lawrence, winding its course for about 40 miles, whilst the background of the panoramic scene is filled up by extensive plains, running backwards to lofty mountains in the distance, with Point Levi opposite, and the Island of Orleans in the distance, whilst the junction of the River St. Charles, and the Great River, form that magnificent sheet of water, where numerous vessels are to be seen riding at anchor during the summer season.

A walk around the ramparts of the citadel will well repay the stranger, by a magnificent change of scene at every turn he takes. The city itself bears all the resemblance of a
