A Good Conductor.

Phyllis, I conducted you
To the altar, years ago,
Where we promised to be true
To each other, weal or woe;
Nervously we faced the crowd
And caught the train for Dover,
Covered with confetti, proud,
But jolly glad 'twas over.

Pleasantly we've lived since then,
But the times are changing fast,
For I hear the married men
Are to be called up at last;
So, pro tem, you'll miss my glance
At the breakfast table—
I shall be "somewhere in France,"
Doing what I'm able.

Therefore, as our income went
By degrees to nearly zero
Since the war, to pay the rent
You must act the part of hero—
Be a 'bus conductor, dearest
(Wages good—a chance to seize!)

In my dreams your voice, the clearest
Of them all I'll hear; O rarest
Phyllis, of the fair the fairest,
Calling "Fares, please!"

WILFRID L. RANDELL, in T. P.'s Weekly.

A very deaf old man went into a drug store to have a prescription filled. "Seventy-five cents," said the druggist as he wrapped up the bottle.

The old gentleman took a well-worn purse from his pocket, opened it, and laid a nickel on the counter.

"I said seventy-five cents," yelled the druggist.

"Well," said the old man, "didn't I give you the five cents?"

"Dog-gone you!" said the druggist as he swept the nickel into the cash drawer. "I made two cents on you anyway."
