

ARRESTED AT QUEENSTOWN.

tured by English Detertives.

Winnipeg. Aug. 5.—James Robertson, who is wanted here for allegell frand, was arrested at Queenstown, Ireland, on board the Lucania, by Scotland Yard detectives. He left Winnipeg on July 2, with $1,000 belonging to Barry Cummings, one of his partners, and with another $1,000, the property of George Edwards.

It is also said that he carried on his business in the Ashdown Block here in an irregular manner, and may have to meet a number of cheques when he is returned to this city for trial.

Then probably you know the evils of distention, fermentation and irritation that accompany digestive troubles. Next important is to know how promptly Nerviline cures. Quick as wink it relieves bloating and feeling of fullness, puts the entire digestive apparatus in perfect order, makes you feel fit and fine all over. For internal pain Polson's Nerviline surpasses every known remedy. Keep it in the house always, it's a source of comfort, in the hour of emergancy. Large bottles for 25c. at all dealers.

Mohawks" New Chief.

Deseronto, Aug. 5.—The death of Dr. Acland Oronhyatekha having made vacant the post of head chief of the Mohawks on the Tyendinaga Indian Reserve, Joseph Hill, Jr., a cousin of the deceased, has been choscousin of the deceased, has been chosen as his successor.

The election was held at the Indian council house, with William R. Aylesworth, Government agent for the Bay of Quinte district, as returning officer. The polling was open, and took place between 9 a. m. and 5 p. m. .

Sampson Green, for many years a councillor of the Mohawk band, opposed the successful candidate, who is a young man, and had not previously aspired to a position in the council. There were 225 eligible voters, and 163 votes were actually cast, the kinsman of the late chief reserving 121.

A WONDERFUL RECORD.

As made up by improved and exact processes, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a most efficient remedy for regalating all the womanly functions, carrecting displac ments, as prolapsus, anteversion and retreversion, overcaming palaful periods, toming up the nerves and bringing about a perfect state of health. It cures the backache, periadical headwhes, the dragging-down distress in the palvic region, the pits and tenderness over lewer abdaminal region, fires up the pelvic catarrhal drain, as disagrecable and weakening, and overcomes every form of weakness incident to the organs distinctly feminine.

"Favorite Prescription" is the only medicine for women, the makers of which print their formula on the bottle-wrapper, thus taking their patrons into their formula on the strengest pessible endorsement of the most enument medical practitioners and writars of our day, recommending it for the diseases for which "Favorite Prescription" is advised.

The elevator of the Washington solemnly slow descent of twenty min-utes, and Rhoda Jamison, feeling somewhat overawed by the world as seen from the top of the monument, sat down on a bench near the elevator door. She needed a few minutes to readjust her thoughts and to plan for the rest of the day.

Rhoda had saved every possible penny from her salary during the school term in order to take this Washington trip and had determined to crowd as much sightseeing into her ten days as any other Washington tourist had

She had spent hours with the visiting milliner in her town planning ev-ery detail of the time and had finally arrived in the city and taken a cab diery detail of the time and had finally arrived in the city and taken a cab directly to the quiet lodgings she had recommended. The milliner had, however, forgotten to take into consideration the fact that the girl had never been accustomd to a city and to city ways and had therefore failed to prepare her for the feeling of desolation and loneliness that grew more and more oppressive every minute.

The Congressional library had satisfied her love of elegance, the capitol and the White House had seemd like old friends from the pictures in the geography and history from which she had taught for months, but in her classes she had been the personality. Here she seemed to dwindle into nothingness, and the things that had been mere ideas and pictures towered over her oppressively, and she was overcome by her littleness and her loneliness and longed for some one to speak to her with a hint of friendly interest. The big, broad shouldered man sitting on the other end of the bench she had seen walking down the steps of the monument. He had evidently felt so secure in his superb physical strength that he walked down to examine more closely the inscriptions on the stones that could not be studied so well from the elevator.

She saw him take a fountain pen from his pocket, adjust it and finally sort a package of souvenir post cards and begin writing industriously.

She remembered the package she had bought to send her pupils, so she took her own pen from her hand bag and commenced racking her brain for little things to write that would amuse them.

The postal she liked best of all, a dantitly colored view of the monument itself, she addressed to her mother. Across it she wrote, "It's so very big, and I feel so little and so lonely."

She leaned forward to fiirt a bit of dust from the tip of her pen, and a whilf of air blew me postal from her lap and left it lying at the big man's feet.

He saw it there and, thinking he had dropped one of his own, stooped and

He saw it there and, thinking he had dropped one of his own, stooped and picked it up, reading it leisurely.
"I feel so little and lonely," he read, and, surprised, turned to meet the flushed face of the girl.
"It's mine," she said, holding out her heard for."

"It's mine," she said, holding out her hand for it.

"Do you feel that way, too?" he asked eagerly. "That's me exactly!"

"I shouldn't have called you really little," she answered, with the frank friendliness of a girl who had never met with a circumstance that would cause her to be suspicious of humanity. "I reckon you are referring to the first part of the sentence. "It is so big' would really seem more suitable."

"That's right," he laughed, looking at the postal, "but that just proves that I can hold more loneliness than you, for I am feeling lonely from the soles of my feet to the top of my new feit hat that I bought in Carson City to see the sights of Washington in."

"At least you are farther from home

"At least you are farther from home than I. I'm from South Carolina," she chatted, three days' abstinence from conversation having left her with a surplus on hand.

"I was just sending some of these sightseeing together this arteracon? he said with a touch of beyish shyness. "I wonder," she said slowly.

The joy of companionship settled the question for them, and he called at her bearding house morning after morning, guidebook in hand, the plan for the day already laid out. lay already laid out.

day already laid out.

They had left the trip to Arlington for the last afternoon of her stay, and they wandered through the grounds, more beautiful than ever in their early summer foliage, until they reached the spot overlooking the Potomac, where the tall shaft rises in honor of the heroes of the Spanish war.

"This is the lovellest spot of all," he said, as they sat down on the grassy slope with their faces turned toward the river. "Washington will seem dead after I put you on the train this afternoon. Have you enjoyed this week, little woman?" a slight nervousness in his voice.

"It has been—perfect," she said softly. "After I had you to talk to the crowds didn't seem unfriendly at all—they changed into a set of good natured passersby."

they changed into a set of good natured passersby."

"I-er-haven't seemed to miss the boys much lately, either," he said, absentmindedly, watching her slender fingers arrange the largest daisies and clover leaves that she found near her, "but I'll go to missing them again the very minute your train pulls out this afterneon."

He sat up straight suddenly and looked at her almost sternly.

"Do you think a man ought to be forgiven for telling a lie?" he demanded abruptly.

Her face paled slightly, and her eyes abruptly.

Her face paled slightly, and her eyes were large with a fear that he might in some way confess himself unworthy of the friendly confidence she had placed in him. The unconventionality of their acquaintance stood out in her mind, suddenly, as viewed from the world's standpoint.

"You haven't—lied to me?" she asked faintly.

"You haven't—lied to me?" she asked faintly.

"Absolutely! No one ever told a bigger one," he said, with his eyes fixed on the clover leaves, failing to see her pallor, "for it will not be the boys I'll be missing, it will be—just you."

Her color came back with a rush, and she avoided his eyes as she rose hastily to her feet, the daisies and clover leaves falling to the ground.

"I'm sure I will be late for my train if we don't hurry back," she said abruptly.

if we don't hurry back," she said abruptly.

"I almost wish you would miss it—it seems a shame that you cannot afford to stay longer when I have more money than I can possibly spend—unless the town will let me build 'em another library. You couldn't let me—er"—he stammered, not knowing how to express himself.

"No, I couldn't," she blazed, catching his half formed idea.

"There—there—little woman—don't get huffy. I suppose I do bump up against conventionalities occasionally, but somehow I hate for you not to have everything you want," he blurted out.

have everything you want," he blurted out.

Her eyes softened, and when they reached the station she watched his broad shoulders as he elbowed his way through the crowd at the ticket office and wondered why, now her face was turned homeward, she should feel more homesick than ever.

When he had put her on the train, he leaned over and spoke determinedly. "I'm coming to South Carolina before I go back west."

She didn't answer, and he took from his coat pocket one of the clover leaves she had dropped on the ground at Arlington and held it up before her. She saw it had four leaves.

"Do you know what I am going to wish? That when I go back west—you'll go with me"—he waited, a big, awkward boy in his embarrassment, for her to look at him.

"I—I—the train is starting." she said, holding out her hand hastily, "but—if one finds a four leaf clover—he is supposed to get his wish."

Protection From Autoists.

Paris, Aug. 5.—The frequency of automobile accidents in France has led to the formation of a society of protection against the abuse of auto-mobiling.

They propose to circulate petitions throughout the republic which will be presented to Parliament.

The memorial will ask more rigid speed laws and other safeguards. Moreover, the new society will lend material support to the victims of irresponsible automobilists in their efforts to secure reparation.
