

Supreme Court

From the conclusion of the McDonald manslaughter case, to the calling of the Montalbetti perjury case, the time of Judge Harvey's court was occupied mostly in considering small debt cases.

Smith vs. the Massey-Harris Co., was tried on the 11th inst. This was an action for the recovery of money paid into the Massey-Harris office at Macleod, by the plaintiff under the mistaken idea that it was being paid to the Deering Co. for a plough. It appeared from the evidence that some time ago the son of the plaintiff had purchased a plough from the defendants and had given a note for the same, but as the plough did not work and it was returned. The company had no record of the return and refused to pay back the money. It was argued that the money could not be recovered as it was mixed with law and fact. It was argued for the plaintiff that there could be no ground for the contention of the defendants, as there was an absolute failure of consideration for the note of the son, and also that he was not a party to the action. His Lordship held that the contention was proper and gave judgment for plaintiff.

Joseph Hicks for plaintiff, R. B. Bennet of Cougheed & Bennet, appeared for the defendants.

Kanouse vs. Beersford was tried on the 12th inst. This was an action for the purchase price of furniture contained in a hotel, at the sulphur springs at Blairmore. The dispute was, that the plaintiff sold the goods, which the defendants denied, although they took possession of the going concern, and had used the property at the time of the trial. His Lordship found for the plaintiff but appointed a referee to report on the particular goods.

Joseph Hicks for the plaintiff, E. P. McNeill and T. B. Martin for defendant.

The Montalbetti perjury case was called promptly at 10 o'clock Friday June 14, before Judge Harvey, with William M. Campbell acting as Crown prosecutor.

C. F. Harris and P. J. Nolan appeared for the defence.

The following jurors were selected: W. Tuskey, W. Skelding, S. DeRenzie, W. A. Lether, D. C. Hobbs and J. A. Struthers.

All witnesses were excluded from the court room, excepting D. J. Campbell of Macleod, and B. M. Bridges of Nelson, B. C. Over Thirty witnesses were in attendance. Wm. M. Campbell, Crown prosecutor, addressed the jury, stating the charge against Montalbetti.

The first witness called was Duncan J. Campbell, who testified that he was, in 1901 a Commissioner, and that the defendant had appeared before him in that year, and made a sworn declaration as to improvements made on this land known as the Blairmore townsite.

C. P. Lyon was called for the prosecution. Witness said that he laid information against Montalbetti before Judge Wade of Edmonton. Judge Wade had handed the information back to him along with the warrant for the arrest of accused. Witness had taken the warrant to the commanding officer at the barracks and had carried the information paper to Blairmore and delivered them to the judge there. At this point in the testimony Judge Harvey expressed his surprise that a judge would take such procedure with official papers as had been testified to by the witness. Mr. Lyon of his own personal knowledge could not say that a root house had or had not been erected in 1898, by defendant. He declared that Felix Montalbetti did not keep a cow and calf in 1899, but admitted that he did keep them in 1900. At no time to his knowledge, had the defendant kept any kind of poultry. He had not built a stable and corral until the year 1900, and with the exception of
