CABINET CHANGES AT OTTAWA.
For reasons which at present we are unable to give very accurately, another change has been made in the Cabinet. Mr. Masson, Minister of Militia, has been appointed President of the Council, in place of Mr. O'Connor, who goes at the head of the Post Office Department. Sir Alexander Campbell who was Postmaster General takes Mr. Masson's place at the head of the Militia Department. For some time past Mr. Masson's health has been very poor, and at times his physicians have despaired of his recovery. His department of late has become more important than hitherto, and in consideration perhaps of his feebleness he has been transferred to where there is less worry and duty.

There is nothing remarkable about the change at all; but many had looked to the infusion of new blood into the cabinet, and have been disappointed. There are a great many too who had thought that the first change would see Mr. Costigan take his seat at the Council, but Mr. Costigan who saw inside the screen, perhaps did not expect as much at the present. But those friends of Mr. Costigan who have stood by him as he has stood by them and the party of which they are members, have not relinquished their hopes of seeing him rewarded yet. We believe the Irish Canadian advocates that Mr. Costigan be appointed Clerk of the Privy Council. This office is worth $3,200 a year, a rather fair salary, but we cannot be brought to believe that Mr. Costigan could be prevailed upon to accept it. We were surprised that the Irish Canadian, knowing or pretending to know the claims of Mr. Costigan on the party should have advocated his appointment to a position which we think would fall far short of rewarding him for his services to his party, which we may add were services to his country. He who fights manfully to the front in the heat of the battle, should not be content to sit ignobly down in the camp after the contest is ended and spend his energies there. His spirit being the same in both cases he will naturally long for a life of activity and glory. His true $3,200 a year is something, but the mere recording of the doings of others is an occupation for which the most ordinary mind is fitted. We can't believe Mr. Costigan would take this position; if he does we do not mind our readers considering that we have been mistaken in him.

AN ART ACADEMY FOR CANADA.
The Governor General has proposed the establishment of an Art Academy in Canada, whose objects, according to the Telegraph, are:
First—the institution of a National Gallery. Second—the holding of exhibitions. Third—the establishment of Schools of Art and Design. Membership will be extended to painters, sculptors, architects and designers who are eminent in their professions; and professorships will be established for these branches and for anatomy, chemistry, ancient history, ancient literature and antiquities.

Such an institution would put Canada to the front in the world of art. We strongly approve of the proposal, and those who have read the STAR will remember that on more than one occasion we have said that it would be highly advisable for Canada to have such an Academy.

BISMARCK.
It was reported yesterday that Bismarck was dead; but to-day we learn his health is improving. Some accounts say that the chancellor is troubled with rheumatism and neuralgia; other, and probably better authenticated accounts say the prince is becoming very gross, and that fat around the heart is the trouble. Bismarck, it is evident, is worrying much of late about several things, the chief cause of his trouble, it is said, being the rapid growth of the French nation. Beyond all these causes the chancellor is now a very old man, and in the course of nature must soon pass the way the most worthless of us go.

THE REAL CAUSE.
MR. COLLINGWOOD SCHREIBER has been sent west to repress it the government in the building of the Canada Pacific Railway. The St. John Sun attributes failure to him as an superintendent of the Intercolonial Railway; but this no doubt is rather due to the economy which Mr. Schreiber suggested in giving the St. John Sun railroad advertisements, and to his extension of railway patronage to the new convert, the Nesca, than to any lack of administrative ability. At least it has come to our ears from head quarters that this is the case.

MAINE.
In the trouble in Maine those who take the pains to think can see an omen of the fate of the Great Republic at a day perhaps far distant, mayhap quite near. We are not one of those who in every breath of the political atmosphere, sniff rebellion and war, but we do think that the present disgraced middle across our border, most clearly points to the manner in which the huge Republic must die. History the great reflector of the past affords us a valuable light by which to read signs in the gloomy future. It tells us that Rome was once a mighty republic whose wings extended over nearly all the earth; and Carthage too who before Scipio appeared upon the stage might have been considered immortal, tottered and fell till not as much remained of it as of yore, when, as the legend tell, it was inscribed within the strips of a bull's hide.

It is the fate of Republics to fall, because the pillars of a Republic are fixed on shifting sands. It is built up of the people and while the people always exist, still they are always shifting. There is no central column around which the constitution may twine. The statesman rules to-day the demagogue in his place to-morrow. Beyond the turn of politics, beyond the influences of one party and of the other there is no central power to which all the people may look. The President is a Republican, or he may be a Democrat. When states split and rebellion is rampant, there is no one to whom one of the two parties may look for impartiality. Then one faction may control the army, or neither party may control it; it may be on its own account. The President is not even in such a case a figurehead for that term means an impartial neutrality; he is partial or supposed to be so either to Republicanism or Democracy.

Then as in the case of the American Republic, every public officer depends upon the popular will for his existence in office, and so in times when impartiality is imperative he but too often leans to the side where he sees the balance of power exists. This state of affairs is exemplified in the condition of affairs in Maine, where neither constitutional usage, precedent nor law seems to be potent enough against the force of numbers and bribery. But this is only the feeble and distant murmuring of that storm which may not come just now, but which sooner or later must come and see America parcelled off into smaller Republics, or dear knows into what else.

TOO GOOD TO BE TRUE.
It is reported that the Grand Trunk Railway have acquired, or are about acquiring the International Railway with a view of completing their road and forming a connection with the New Brunswick Railway, thus making an air line to the Maritime Provinces, and knocking the Intercolonial Railway into a cocked hat.—Late Telegram.

This we feel quite sure is "too good to be true." Suppose the New Brunswick Railway were to extend to Riviere du Loup and that a bridge were to be built across the St. John River, then indeed we should have a real hnm in Fredericton, for most of the travel and freight of the Grand Trunk from the Upper Provinces would pass through here. Or, supposing the line were to be continued on the other side of the river, and to tap the Intercolonial say at Norton, then Gibson would rapidly develop into a city; and nearly every day people from this side would be seen packing up their effects and going over there. This of course would necessitate the widening of the N. B. R. R. gauge, and it would assuredly "knock the Intercolonial higher than a cocked hat." There is one good reason at least why this does not seem likely to happen. This is the Grand Trunk has a pretty long lease of the road to Portland, and are not prepared to pay enough to satisfy the proprietors of that road. We should be glad indeed to know that there is the slightest truth in the rumor.

TRAVELLING STONES.
Many of our readers have doubtless heard of the famous travelling stones of Australia. Similar curiosities have recently been found in Nevada, which are described as almost perfectly round, the majority of them as large as a walnut, and of an iron nature. When distributed about upon the door, table, or other other level surface, within two or three feet of each other, they immediately begin travelling toward a common centre, and there lie huddled up in a bunch like a lot of eggs in a nest. A single stone removed to a distance of three and a half feet, upon being released at once started off, with wonderful and somewhat conical celerity, to join its fellows; taken away four or five feet, it remained motionless. They are found in a region that is comparatively level, and is not hilly, but bare rocks scattered over this barren region are little basins, from a few feet to a rod or two in diameter, and it is in the bottom of those that the rolling stones are found. They are not, as has been supposed, five or six inches in diameter. The cause of these stones rolling together is doubtless to be found in the material of which they are composed, which appears to be loadstone or magnetic iron ore.

Fredricton Leather Co.
THE Annual General Meeting of the Shareholders of the Fredericton Leather Company will be held at the Company's Works, on THURSDAY, the 29th inst., at 2 o'clock, p. m.
I. W. SIMMONS, Manager.

THE unfortunate wretch, Main, from his coarse abuse of the gentleman at the head of this paper, in the last Courier, is evidently not off his spree yet. It is shocking to have the press disgraced by people with such an insatiable passion for strong drink. Ram is a great curse.

A Remarkable People.
The following graphic sketch is from one of the intendant Edward King's letters from Switzerland to the Boston Journal.—There are numerous specimens of that strange little race of men concerning whose origin so much speculation has been indulged in all through these valleys and mountains. I allude to the dwarf-like beings with parchment faces and expressionless eyes, who lurch and carry the most enormous burdens uncomplainingly, but who appear to have scarcely intelligence enough to tell the time of day. This type provokes the compassion of the traveller. One often sees one of these tiny men yoked to a heavy cart which he drives along with the same stolid effort that a mounted horse would put forth at the work, and with less seeming intelligence than the dog. These lively creatures beguile the way, when they are harassed into carts, by barking and sometimes by fighting, but the men are solemn as if they were mules. Sometimes one of them may be seen blowing a gigantic Alpine horn four or five times as long as himself, and awaking the echoes in the mountains and valleys in a most sombre and distracted fashion. These horns never fail to excite the risibilities of American travellers. They are very long, and the wind which cuts the music reclines on the ground at a long distance from the player. The cottager in a nook in the Alps keeps one of these horns in his front door yard, and practices on it an hour or two in the morning when travellers are passing, in the hope that a few peuce may be thrown to him as a reward for the colossal strain upon his wind-pipe which is required by this singular music. Everywhere in this section the strange flutes it much more to pay his way than in the principal towns of Switzerland. The inhabitants smile when they are remonstrated with, and announce that they have only four months in which to make their profits. They are impervious to all criticism. They make money rapidly, and I found in no village or town in this vicinity any evidence of poverty. People who work a field live coarsely, but have plenty; and they one and all seem eminently contented with their condition. The solid wooden houses, many of which were already a century and a half when Boston was a village, are filled with stores of good cheer.
