Which Was Right?

BY RUTH CAMMISON.

Yesterday's symposium on the question whether it is right to limit one's offspring to the number one can bring up a sad and educate promptly, has spilled over into today.

Two families, Mr. and Mrs. A., who did not do this, and Mr. and Mrs. B., who did, are the subject of the discussion.

Below are two extremely well put arguments on this matter, both, by the way, written by men:

"The cases you cite are not typical, they are abnormal and extreme," declares one reader. "It is selecting the very best on one side for comparison with something entirely out of its class on the other."

"Almost anyone who has lived long enough knows many large families that are well bred and well cared for in every way, the children taught to help in the burdens of caring for the household where harmony and conjugal love are staples. On the other hand there are very few observers who cannot point to many families where there has been but one child, and that one so badly spoiled in the raising that the world would have been better off if the child had never been born. Too often it is the result of selfishness, pure and simple, that but one child (far more often none at all) is produced. Sometimes conditions are such that it is just and right to shut off the reproductive process at that point. No general rule can be laid down from single instances like the above. The general principle of unselfish love underlying the God-given institution of marriage, is a far truer guide than any consideration of finance, or personal ambition."

"I was much interested in the letter recently published in your column from a correspondent who questioned the desirability of having large families and cited A. and B. for examples, writes the other man. It has seemed to me, one of the most hopeful signs of the times that among our middle and upper classes—the terms are not my own—very large families have become the exception."

"Anyone who visits the poorer sections of even a small community can scarcely fail to have pondered thoughtfully the sheer criminality that permits so many helpless children to be brought into a world where, by the nature of the case, they can never have a fair chance. They did not desire life. It was thrust upon them, and what can the poor mites make of it?"

"I hope that we may live to see the day when no marriage among rich or poor can take place without the sanction of a physician's certificate, and I wish it could be ideally impressed upon the minds of every young couple that they have no right to bring children into the world simply for their own selfish gratification. By all the laws of humanity they should have no more than they can properly educate and support. When this becomes an elemental factor in our practical Christian ethics, we shall have taken a long step toward the solution of many of our most pressing problems."

And now, having given this subject a great deal of space because I think it is vital, we shall consider the case closed. I trust the jury will find a satisfactory verdict.

Household Notes.

The summer crinkly crepe dresses should be ironed, if at all, with a very cool iron. Often a careful shaping while slightly damp is all that is necessary.

For apple snow, bake seven large apples, rub through a sieve, add quarter pound sugar, a little essence of vanilla and the whites of two eggs.

A teaspoonful of ammonia mixed with half a cupful of cold tea is said to be excellent for cleaning black felt hats or men's black coats. Apply with a bit of cloth.

A delicious strawberry fluff is made with strawberry jam. Whip a small jar of stiff cream and a jar of jam together. Split little sponge cakes and put the fluff between them.

A delicious hot weather sandwich is made of whole wheat bread, stale, buttered with unsalted butter and spread with chopped olives and walnuts. Raisins also make a good filling.

Swiss eggs are a good luncheon dish for summer. Butter a pie dish, break the yolks with slices of cheese, break the eggs over the cheese and sprinkle with breadcrumbs. Bake until done.

Delightful scent bags or pillows may be made with any dry, fragrant leaves of flowers—geranium leaves, rose petals, heliotrope, lemon verbena. Tie in bags of gauze, or make pillows of gauze.

Net collars with colored embroidery should be washed in soapy water and rinsed first in warm water, then in cold. The latter should have a little salt and vinegar added to set the color.

Russian salad in aspic can be made of almost any kind of left-over vegetables, chopped and arranged in layers in the aspic. Of course, it should be chilled and served with mayonnaise.

Pure chloroform will remove paint, grease and other stains from colored garments. Put clean blotting paper under the spot and pour the chloroform—a few drops—on it, in the open air.

To make dropable water, so often used in starching, take two ounces of white gum arabic crystals and dissolve in half pint of warm water. Strain through muslin, then bottle and cork.

Scores Inez Millholland.

W. S. P. H. Was About to Make Her Active Militant.

London, July 18.—Leaders of the Women's Social and Political Union the organization of militant suffragettes, to-day criticized Inez Millholland the New York lawyer and suffrage worker for getting married, declaring that it shows a weakening of her adherence to the "cause."

In spite of Miss Millholland's statement that she will continue actively in suffrage work, Miss Sylvia Pankhurst, daughter of Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, who is temporarily out of prison because of illness, believes that love and suffrage do not go together.

"Miss Millholland made a great mistake in letting a foolish sentiment get the better of her judgment," said Miss Pankhurst. "She came here to help our cause in England and we were just about to make her an active member of our organization when she upsets all plans by getting married and going away on her honeymoon. We must place patriotism to our sisterhood above such things if we hope to win."

WASHINGTON, July 25.—Administration officials were not inclined to view the Mexican situation to-day as requiring urgent attention, and it appeared that the conference between the President and Ambassador Wilson might not be held till Monday.

BUCHAREST, July 25.—Greece and Serbia today both definitely rejected the Roumanian proposal for the conclusion of a provisional armistice during the conference at Nish. The two governments say they can only consent to cessation of hostilities after signature of an armistice and of the preliminaries of peace.

LONDON, July 25.—Just when the Balkan situation seemed to be taking a more favorable turn, Bulgaria, having recognized the fact of her defeat, and being ready to negotiate for peace, a new situation has been caused by the re-appearance of Turkey on the scene, and the whole affair has now taken a more serious aspect.

A feeling of approaching consternation has been caused by the report that the Turks are advancing towards Philippopolis. King Ferdinand has balked the intervention of the Powers.

LONDON, July 25.—The utmost secrecy is observed as to the results of the discussion at the Ambassadorial Conference yesterday. All the members have doubtless agreed that some step must be taken and that the Eos-Midia frontier line must be observed, but the ambassadors have, apparently, been unable as yet to reach a decision as to how this shall be accomplished. In ambassadorial quarters there is a feeling of uncertainty with regard to the future. There is no expressed view as to how they can reach a common agreement as to the steps to be adopted.

LONDON, July 25.—Mrs. Pankhurst, who has again been released after being imprisoned since Monday, is reported to be critically ill, and transfusion of blood has been ordered. Her condition is the result of her hunger and thirst strikes. Lady Sylvia Smith, daughter of the Earl of Artrim, Mrs. Lawrence and Miss Sharp were sent to prison to-day for a fortnight, on a charge of disorderly conduct during an attempt to hold a suffrage meeting at the entrance to the lobby of the House of Commons yesterday. They refused to find sureties for good behaviour.

HOUSEHOLD NOTES.

If a book gets grease spots on its leaves, they can be removed by dipping a camel's-hair brush in rectified spirits of turpentine and moistening the spot. When the turpentine is dry, moisten it with spirits of wine, and the turpentine will disappear.

Salad jellies are an excellent way to utilize all sorts of left-overs. Sometimes the foundation jelly may be made with the water vegetables have been boiled in, combined in the usual way with gelatine. All such jellies should be sliced with a warm knife.

VINEYARD HAVEN, Mass., July 25.

The steamer Millinocket, from Stockton, Maine, for New York, with paper, arrived here to-day in a sinking condition, from a collision at midnight at Pollock Rip Shoal, during a fog, with the s.s. Persian, from Philadelphia to Boston with freight and passengers. A wireless from the Persian says that her bow has been damaged. She was on the way up Nantucket Sound when she sent her wireless message. The Millinocket left Stockton on Wednesday and called at Boston for additional cargo. She rounded Cape Cod South, early last evening, and soon after ran into a thick bank of fog. The Pollock Rip Shoal Lightship was picked up at midnight. Just before reaching it six miles further south the Persian suddenly loomed out of the fog on the starboard side. Neither steamer had time to stop or veer; the Persian heading diagonally toward the Millinocket, so that the blow was a glancing one. She was struck in the starboard side; her plating was ripped open to the waterline, the water came into her hold, and the pumps were started. The Persian was meanwhile lost to sight.

PORTIA and NERISSA.

(The Merchant of Venice Act V.)

PORTIA: That light we see is burning in my hall: How far that little candle throws his beams! So shines a good deed in a naughty world.

NERISSA: When the moon shone, we did not see the candle; so doth the greater glory dim the less: A substitute shines brightly as a king; Until a king be by; and then his state Empties itself, as doth an inland brook into the main of waters.—Music, hark!

NERISSA: 'Tis—'twere music, Madam, of the house.

PORTIA: Nothing is good, I see, without respect: Methinks it sounds much sweeter than by day.

NERISSA: Silence bestows the virtue on it, Madam.

PORTIA: The crow doth sing as sweetly as the lark, When neither is attended; and I think, The nightingale, if she should sing by day, When every goose is cackling, would be thought No better a musician than the wren. How many things by season seasoned are To their right praise, and true perfection! —Shakespeare.

SONNET XXVI.

Sweet is the rose, but grows upon a thorn; Sweet is the Juniper, but sharp is her bough; Sweet is the eglantine, but pricketh the hand; Sweet is the fire-flower, but burns the hand; Sweet is the fire-flower, but burns the hand; Sweet is the cyprus, but his kind is tough; Sweet is the nut, but bitter is his pill; So every sweet, with some is tempered still. That maketh it be coveted the more, For easy things that may be got will cost most sorts of men do set but little store. Why then should I account of little gain? That endless pleasure shall unto me gain? —Shakespeare (1553-1598).

"ORNAMENT."

The world is full of deceived with ornaments. In law, what plea so tainted and corrupt, But being seasoned with a gracious voice, Obscures the show of evil; In religion, What damped error, but some sober brow Will bless it, and approve it with a text, Hiding the grossness with fair ornaments? There is no vice so simple, but as some sumes Some mark of virtue on its outward parts. How many cowards, whose hearts are all as false, As stars of heaven, wear yet upon their chins The Beards of Hercules and frowning Mars; Who, inward-searched, have lives as full of fear as little waxen candles, who melt ere they can sparkle with a word. And these assume but valour's exhibition, To render them redoubted. Look on beauty, And you shall see 'tis purchased by the weight; Which therefore works a miracle in nature, Making them lightest that wear most of it. So are those crisped snaky golden locks, Which make such wanton gambols with the wind, Upon-supposed fairness, often known To be the dowry of a second head; The skull that bred them in the sepulchre. Thus ornament is but the guileless shore To a most dangerous sea; the beauties' robes scarf Velling an Indian beauty; in a word,
