That Christmas Shopping.

By RUTH CAMERON.

How about that Christmas shopping? I hope you have already done it, but if you haven't, may I make a few suggestions in regard to it? In the first place, go dressed as simply and lightly as possible. My method has been to wear a medium weight suit and a long coat, and to check the coat when I reached the shopping district. Of course if I have to walk any distance between shops I put it on again, but when the shops are close together I find I can slip from one to another without catching cold, as I am not over-heated. Of course this saves you the burden of carrying about heavy clothing. Wear a small, light hat, don't carry a muff and be sure to have a bag that will hold your small parcels, so that you won't have the mental strain of trying to keep track of five or six little bundles.

These seem like small things, but every little thing helps or hinders at a time like this.

Plan Your Campaign.

Of course you'll make out a list before you start. Don't simply jot down the things you have to get, but plan your campaign. Decide what shops you want to visit for various gifts, make out a route and put against the name of each shop all the things you want to look for there.

Go in the morning if you possibly can, the earlier the better, not only for the sake of the shop girl but for your own sake. The ratio of accomplishment between morning and afternoon I have always found to be about two to one. One woman whom

I know gets her list, her clothes and everything absolutely ready the night before, so that she can go in town when her husband goes. Yes, her dishes have to wait, but her kitchen isn't crowded in the afternoon and the shops are.

Don't shop for so long a time at a stretch that you get faint. Stop and eat something hot. You can afford to spend the time and the money better than you can afford to save them. You'll get both your money's and your time's worth in efficiency.

A "Thank You" Costs Nothing.

Look pleasant. Thank the shop girl who waits on you. Smile at the crowd instead of glaring at them. After all this isn't supposed to be a joyless struggle, this Christmas business, but an expression of the love of man for his Maker and his fellow-men, the flowering of the Christian spirit of brotherhood. If you haven't some of this spirit toward shop girl and crowd and friends and enemies, though you give far more than you can afford, though you wear out your soul and body in shopping tours, you have not Christmas.

Where We Landed in Greece.

Facts About Salonika, The Famous Old Greek Seaport.

Salonika, the Greek port where the allied troops landed, is a remarkable town in a number of ways. It was at that town that St. Paul addressed his two epistles to the Thessalonians, and even in his time the town was over three hundred years old and famous.

The town is quite the most important of the Balkan ports, and the terminus of several of the chief Balkan railways, a fact of great importance in the landing and movement of troops.

It possesses the finest harbour of any of the Balkan seaports, for not only is it naturally a fine anchoring place for big ships, but in the last few years a breakwater six hundred yards long, with two piers each a third of that length have been built.

The people who live in Salonika—pronounced, by the way, as though spelt Sal-on-ee-ka—are of all nationalities—Greeks, Turks, Bulgarians, British, French, Americans, Jews and others. The representatives of each race always wear their own national costume.

Another great advantage it has for troops landing there is the fact that it is defended on the land side from attack by a great chain of lakes, making it extremely difficult to capture. The Greeks, in the last Balkan War captured it because they managed to get in the town a few hours before the Bulgarians, and they have held on to it ever since.

Henry V. to His Troops at Agincourt.

(By Shakespeare.)
He which hath no stomach to this fight,
Let him depart; his passport shall be made,
And crowns for convoy put into his purse;
We would not die in that man's company
That fears his fellowship to die with us.
This day is call'd the feast of Crispian.
He that outlives this day, and comes safe home,
Will stand a tip-top when this day is named.
And rouse him at the name of Crispian.
He that shall live this day, and see old age,
Will yearly on the vigil feast his neighbors,
And say "To-morrow is Saint Crispian."
Then will he strip his sleeve and show his scars,
And say "These wounds I had on Crispian's day."
Old men forget; yet all shall be forgotten.
But he'll remember with advantages
What he did that day; than shall our names
Familiar in his mouth as household words.
Harry the king, Bedford and Exeter,
Warwick and Talbot, Salisbury and Gloucester,
Be in their flowing cups freshly remembered.
This story shall the good man teach his son;
And Crispian, Crispian shall ne'er go by,
From this day to the ending of the world,
But we in it shall be remembered;
We few, we happy few, we band of brothers;
For he to-day that sheds his blood with me
Shall be my brother; be he ne'er so vile,
This day shall gentle his condition;
And gentlemen in England now a-bed
Shall think themselves accursed they were not here,
And hold their manhoods cheap while any speaks
That fought with us upon Saint Crispian's day.

A soldier who fought at Mons and is now discharged through disablement, was to have been married at Bolnes, Firth of Forth, says a London paper. Over a hundred guests assembled, but the bride failed to turn up. Two girl friends, we are told by the Exchange Telegraph Co's. correspondent, there and then offered to fill the breach, and as a result there was an actual toss up as to which one should become the soldier's bride the next week. The winner was an old sweetheart of the soldier.

HYMN OF HATE.

It makes no odds if people hate you, if they malign you and berate you; for if you're walking circumspectly, and doing your devoir correctly, what people say will never hurt you, or knock the polish from your virtue. Let people hate you, if that action affords them solid satisfaction. It's when you hate yourself, my neighbour, that hatred breeds, as with a saber. When I left home this morning, growling, and showed the folks a visage scowling, and spoke no word that they might treasure, I spoiled for them the whole day's pleasure. That's why I hold myself so cheaply, that's why I hold myself like blazes, he can't be soothed with cheerup phrases. And every time we are descending to doing things that need defending, remorse is in our bosoms grating; we know the bitterness of hating.
