Proud of Premonitions.

By RUTH CAMERON.

Do you ever have premoni-tions?

I have a friend who has them, and who is very proud of them.

It is useless to try to persuade her that they do not mean anything. She will indignantly tell you of an occasion when she had a premonition and something happened.

"There was the time when I didn't want John to go on the fishing trip, and the baby was taken so ill while he was away," she will say.

"And then there was the day I had the premonition my sister wouldn't come when she wrote me she was going to, and sure enough, she didn't.
And so forth and so on, as long as you care to listen.

Now, About The Things That Never Come.

Now, I do not dream of questioning her veracity. I am quite willing to believe she had the premonitions. Although she did not always remember to speak of it before the event. That is a mistake that prophets often make.

But what I do question, is this—whether she ever took account of the number of times she has had premonitions and they did not amount to anything. I have a suspicion that if she did this she would find that they outnumbered the others ten to one.

As it is, they slip out of her mind and that is the end of them.

A housemate of mine said to me the other day when I was going on a little journey, "I hate to have you go—I have a premonition that something is going to happen you."

Another Way of Saying "I Shall Worry."

And then, before I could answer, he caught himself up and said, "I am ashamed of that. Saying I have a premonition is only another way of saying, 'I shall worry,' and I won't handicap you that way."

I think everyone with a pessimistic or worrying tendency has premoni-tions, a feeling in the bones that something is going to turn out wrong.
Optimists have the opposite kind of premonitions, a feeling in the bones that something is going to come out right. On the whole, that is a much pleasanter feeling, at least for those who have it. Those who are connected with him sometimes suffer just as much inconvenience from his groundless optimism.

Always Analyze Your Premonitions.

In neither case should the premoni-tion be made the basis of action.
Analyze it. Go to the bottom of the matter. Find out if there is any real reason at the root of it, any cause for apprehending danger, any grounds for being sure of success. Then, when you have gone to the bottom, look carefully at what you find and act accordingly.

Premonition and superstition are twin cousins.

Of course there are times when sentiment, as well as reason, has some influence on our actions, but don't get the premonition habit. It will surely cause both you and those about you much needless unhappiness.

Besides, half the time premonition is just another word for indigestion.

Canada's Part in the War

BRIEF REVIEW OF THE PAST TWO YEARS.

The Ottawa correspondent of the Montreal Star gives an interesting resume of the part Canada has taken in the great war. Despite its conciseness, it contains so much useful information that we publish it for the benefit of those who may not have seen the original. He says:—

Ottawa, July 29.—With a record of patriotic achievement and general prosperity in the face of conditions at times adverse, Canada concludes next week her second year as a participant in the European war.

Such a lot has been done, so many events have transpired, and so much history made, that any brief review must be superficial and general in its character.

Canadian Army of 360,000.

The greatest problems were those which were encountered in the first year or more, and particularly in the first six months of the war. Since then, things have been systematized, the military machine has worked more smoothly, while the country's splendid response to the call to arms has been maintained. We are down to raise half million men. Nearly 360,000 of that number have so far been enlisted or will have been by the end of the month.

Predominant Spirit of Buoyant Optimism.

Likewise, the nervousness displayed at the outset of the war has complet-ly disappeared from commercial circles. The country's business is good, crops are good, finances are in good condition, and underlying all, is the predominant spirit of buoyant optimism in the inevitable issue of the great conflict.

In view of all, the Canadians enter upon the third year of the struggle in better spirits and confidence than at any time since the memorable August 4, two years ago.

The Men the Great Achievement.

The men we have raised and sent, or are preparing to send, to fight the Empire's battle, are the great and outstanding achievement of Canada's two years at war. While, as stated, the number is approximately 360,000, the latest figures up to July 15, give the total exactly as 350,655.

Ontario leads, with 145,193; Manitoba and Saskatchewan, comprising one military district, have contributed 71,825; Quebec province, 36,890; the three Maritime Provinces, 31,632; British Columbia, 33,379; and Alberta, 31,735.

Nearly Four Canadian Divisions.

Canada has three complete divisions at the front, with the greater part of the fourth division gone as reinforcements. The total overseas is around 175,000 men. To make up this total there have been sent abroad or in progress of organization, 13 battalions of mounted infantry, four divisional cavalry squadrons, 74 batteries of artillery, 246 battalions of infantry, five pioneer battalions, and two construction battalions.

There are big training camps at Barrie (Camp Borden); Valcartier; Severn, Manitoba; Sarnia, Alberta; Vernon, B.C.; and Aldershot, N.S.

front is too recent history to need to be gone over. The heroism and efficiency at St. Julien, at Ypres, Festubert, Givenchy and more recently at Hooge, are all fresh in the public mind. The casualties reported up to date are around forty thousand, with about a quarter of that number dead—either killed in action or having succumbed as the results of wounds.

War Cost Canada $260,000,000 to Date.

The war comes high, financially.
The expenditure so far on that account is roughly speaking, $260,000,- 000. The present rate, according to an official statement this week, is twenty millions a month, or about $700,000 a day.

DIVERSIFIED FARMING.

The farmers raise so many crops the harvest season never stops. They're always reaping oats or hay, or putting winter wheat away; alfalfa helps to pay their debts, and keeps the world in cigarettes, and they have corn and Johnson grass, and sorghum, rape and garden sass. So, be the weather dry or wet, some crop will be a good safe bet. The beans may shrivel in the heat, but there'll be divers kinds of wheat; the oats may languish in the rain, but there'll be lots of other grain.
The cockleburrs may pine away, but there'll be stacks of nutritious hay. The western farmers used to raise but little else than yellow maize, and if a crop they chance to lose, in wintertime they ate their shoes. Crop failure meant a famine then; the fields were full of hungry men. But now the corn may die the death, may wither in the hot wind's breath, and still these farmers tool their cars, and smoke the crimson-band cigars, and take to town the shining bones, and buy a peck of precious stones.

Antique blue—the blue with a strong gray or "old" tone in it—is promised for one of the autumn colors.
Children's dresses either have the waistline at the normal place or their dresses hang straight from the shoulders.
The graceful slim line given by the coat dresses perhaps accounts for their lasting popularity.
Purple will be a favored color as a trimming, and it is rumored that the hat of purple velvet will to some extent take the place of the black velvet hat.
Parasols are in all sorts of fantastic shapes; they may be flat and plain or flat with a shirred surface, and a few are exactly like a mushroom.
