AN ENJOYABLE AUTOMOBILE TOUR

Dr. and Family Have Returned from Motoring Tour Through New Brunswick and Nova Scotia

Dr. Murray and family returned to town a few days ago from a very pleasant two weeks outing in their touring car through New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. The territory covered included the Counties of Restigouche, Gloucester, Northumberland, Kent, Westmorland, Albert, Kings, and St. John, in New Brunswick and Cumberland, Colchester, Pictou, Halifax, Hants, Kings, Annapolis and Digby in Nova Scotia: taking in all the important cities towns and villages on the way. The distance travelled was in the neighbourhood of 1500 miles. The greatest distance covered in any one day was 165 miles.

Ideal weather with continual sunshine and balmy breezes favoured the party throughout the whole trip, broken only by a slight shower during one night in Truro and another in St. John—just enough to allay the dust and keep the air clear.

The highway to Bathurst, with the exception of from Campbellton to Dalhousie Junction, also for a short distance west of Dalhousie and for 6 miles west of Bathurst were in very fair condition. From Eel River bar to Belldune no better roads could be found in any country district in the Province. Also from Bathurst through to Grand Anse, Caraque and Tracadie, it was only a question of how fast you wished to travel, (keeping of course within the statutory speed limit).

A noteworthy variation however was experiences at the now famous portage bog about 25 miles east of Chatham on the Richibucto road, where slime and mud, the accumulations of the road washing of several years, had been carefully taken out of the ditches and heaped on the surface of the highway for a distance of about half a mile.

Surely the Director of Ceremonies who was responsible for this piece of "road making" will be a eligible for appointment as roadmaster on the projected Provincial highway.

A washout east of Moncton, caused by heavy torrents of rain a couple of weeks before, was also encountered.

The roads throughout Nova Scotia were certainly all that could be desired, except for a short distance over the Cobequid Mountains between Earltown and Truro and a number of wooden sluices, or culverts, which were invariably either considerably higher or lower than the road grade.

From Truro to Shubenacadie, thence to Windsor, Grand Pre, Wolfville, Kentville, Waterville, Berwick, Middleton, Lawrencetown, Paradise, Bridgetown, Annapolis, Bear River and Digby the highway was just like one continuous pavement, and the only limit to speed, was the speed of the car.

A unique sight in the counties of Annapolis and Digby, N. S. was the employment of oxen for farm work instead of horses. However neither horses nor oxen appeared to be afraid of automobiles in that section. It was noticed also that horses everywhere are rapidly becoming reconciled to this modern means of locomotion. The frightened horse is now the exception.

Altogether this trip was considered a most enjoyable one and well worth the sacrifice of time and effort required to accomplish it.

THE Regina Leader says—Canadian manufacturers have placed tens of millions of dollars of fire insurance with New England companies. Their "loyalty" has not suffered. Yet those same manufacturers try to tell us that if the Canadian farmer sells a bushel of grain in the United States his loyalty will vanish.

(with all due respect—of course to the speed laws), was that dictated by comfort and convenience.

Passing through the quaint little village of Grand Pre, with its historic church and blacksmith shop still standing, recalled the scenes depicted by Longfellow in his well known poem "Evangeline", in which he graphically paints the scenes connected with the expulsion of the Acadians from that place in the month of September 1755. The description however is surely better poetry than history.

The entire route from Windsor through the "Land of Evangeline" and the Annapolis Valley to Digby, presented a continual picture of unsurpassed natural scenery and industrial activity. Apple orchards covering miles in areas, greeted the eye in every direction. Plucking apples from trees by the roadside while going at a high rate of speed, proved an easy feat.

Among the places of interest visited during the tour may be mentioned the Agricultural College and Experiment farm at Truro, the old ship yard at Tatamagouche, the Pictou Battery and Academy, the Lazaretto at Tracadie, and the old French Forts at Annapolis not forgetting the hotels in every city and town, which of course had to be drawn upon at regular intervals.

Not a casualty happened either personal or to the car, no insurmountable obstruction was met on the way, not even a dog committed suicide, although these animals frequently attacked the front wheels fiercely contesting outside encroachments. A common occurrence was the blocking of the highway by cows. On several occasions these were lying on the roadside and on the approach of a car would rise to a point of order, debate every foot of ground until closely overtaken, when they would assert their rights by crossing within a foot of the engine to the opposite side of the road.

A unique sight in the counties of Annapolis and Digby, N. S. was the employment of oxen for farm work instead of horses. However neither horses nor oxen appeared to be afraid of automobiles in that section. It was noticed also that horses everywhere are rapidly becoming reconciled to this modern means of locomotion. The frightened horse is now the exception.
