Festive Gathering Saturday Afternoon

Anyone passing the National club about 4 o'clock on Saturday would see at a glance that something out of the common was taking place. Instead of thoughtful members issuing forth after their midday meal, their wives, daughters and friends were crowding up the stone steps of the Bay street entrance. This was never before seen at the club, and together with the flag at the mast head, showed that it was a gala day. The members had for a long time been preparing a surprise for the lating to be clothed in its ample mantle of time been preparing a surprise for the la-dies of the city, who are always loud in their denunciations of "those fearful clubs, you know." The bachelor members, in particular, were extremely anxious to show their lady friends that the club was not such a bad place after all, and they succeeded admirably if the view that met heir gaze on entering was a criterion.

After wending their way to the dressing After wending their way to the dressing rooms the members and guests were received in the drawing room by the president, Lieut. Col. Denison and Mrs. Denison, assisted by Professor and Mrs. Goldwin Smith. Then a tour through the billiard room, which was utilized for refreshments, and so nicely managed that the "cues" and "counting strings" were the "cues" and "counting strings" were the only indications that it was used for "the noble game." The music rapidly drew those interested to the splendid dining room, where Seager discoursed sweet strains to the dancers. The other rooms ing room, where Seager discoursed sweet strains to the dancers. The other rooms of the club were used as sitting rooms and were duly appreciated by those present. The little white bell knobs around the walls puzzled the ladies considerably until one was touched for the first time by a fair hand and answered by "Jeames," who expected the usual order of "ginger ale for two!" but didn't get it. The interior of the building on the whole was delightfully arranged, and the affair passed off so pleasantly that it will, it was whispered, repeated before the winter is over. On be repeated before the winter is over. On account of being a club affair, and thus to a large extent private, it was somewhat difficult to obtain news, as regards the committee, but there was no trouble in finding that Mr. T. J. Darling was the moving spirit, as all were loud in their praises of the way "Tom" had fixed things. This "Hon. secretery of the committee" was ably assisted, as far as we could learn, by Mr. Davison, Pearson, Farrer, Baker, Piri, Manley and Robinson, with, of course, the president, to keep the "boys" within bounds.

These gentlemen are to be congratulated

These gentlemen are to be congratulate on allowing outsiders to have a glimpse of their beautiful club, and may be sure if the experiment is repeated they will have numerous applicants for the further privilege of being "put up for the day."

THE REGULAR ARMY OH.

Real Soldiers at the New Fort-Their Pay and Duties-The Military School.

Last session of parliament a bill was passed establishing three military schools, one at St. John, N.B., a second at Quebec, a third at Toronto. Each consists of a commandant, captain, two subalterns and 100 men. The men enlist for three years and are paid: privates 50 cents a day, corporals 60, sergeants 80, staff-sergeants 90, sergeant-major $1, and rations and clothing. Already 36 men have been collisted and uniformed, and are already being put through squad drill. Col. Otter is commandant, Major Smith is captain, and the eutenants, Messrs. Seers and Wadmore. Dr. Strange is surgeon. Among the non-coms. are Sergt. Gatghercole, Sergt. Fran-cis, Corp. Davis, all late of the Grenadiers. The military school consists of this corps and of 10 officers and 20 non-commissioned officers from the volunteer militia, who are attached to the regulars in two courses: one for a period of three months, the other for twelve months. In that time they are expected to learn barrack life, internal economy of a regimen to become proficient in ling and handling men. They prac-tice, so to speak, on the 100 men. While attached the officers are allowed $1 day, the non-commissioners oo cents. It is the invention that all officers hereafter ap-pointed in the militia shall have received the certificates of these schools. Already the fort is presenting an animated appearance; regular army discipling is enforced; things are being straightened out; and the scarlet coats of the men and of the officers begin to enliven the streets.

A cavalry school is to be started at Quebec, somewhat similar, and one of the men connected with it is now in town enlisting nen and buying horses.

ROBBERY AND ELOPEMENT.

Young Man Skins Out with a Fellow oarder's Money and His Girl. Last week a man named Carter reported peculiar kind of case to the police. He came here from England a few weeks ago in company with a young woman who lived with him as his wife, although they were not married. They took lodgings at an not married. They took lodgings at an Adelaide street boarding house where one Francis Restorick, who comes from Watford, also held forth. Francis paid a good deal of attention to the Englishman's Jemima, for such is her christian name, and finally robbed him of her affections altogether. But not content with this, Carter alleges that Restorick added insult to injury by stealing a considerable sum of money and a watch from him and then skipping out with the girl. The two were captured at Watford Saturday on the strength of a telegram from the police here. Detective Reid will go after them to-day.

Two old York pioneers on Saturday came down Yonge street and turned into King. Instinctively they cast their eye toward the dome of St. Lawrence hall. They saw the flag at half-mast and almost in the same breath they exclaimed, "Who in the same breath they exclaimed, "Who of us is gone now." They soon learned that Noah L. Piper, one of their oldest members, had died the night before at his home in Yorkville. Mr. Piper was 69 years old and had resided in Toronto since 1831 when he came to Little York. He was of an old New England family and was born in Bristol, Conn. He engaged in the tin and stove trade with his brother Hiram on Yonge street near King where they carried on business for forty years. they carried on business for forty years. He was for a long time a member of the volunteer fire brigade. During the rebellion he rode on horse-back from Toronto to London with despatches. His constant companion was the late Peter Hutty; the two of them went to more funerals than any one else in the city, driving the old black horse to the covered buggy Mr. Piper leaves a widow, three sons, Harry, E. S. and Hiram, and a daughter, Mrs. M. A. Thomas. The York pioneers will bury him this afternoon at St. James' cemetery.

The atmosphere last night was charged with rumors of tragedy. Reports came in from all directions of fatalities and bloody occurrences. First two brakesmen were reported to have been killed on the Great Western, then three men were blown to atoms by an explosion at the round house, next pools of blood were discovered on Elm street, and it was supposed some terrible crime had been committed, and the last but by no means least was that a policeman had been struck dead by a snow fall from the roof of a Yonge street building. These reports came from nowhere and spread everyseveral hours last night in hunting them up, only to find in each and every instance nothing of the kind had happened.

A service for the repose of the souls of the catholics killed in the Humber railway disaster was held at St. Michael's last night. The cathedral was filled with a devout and sympathetic congregation. Special prayers were said by the clergy, and a dirge was sung by the choir. Arch-bishop Lynch preached on the sad affair and the lessons to be drawn from it. His grace has not been heard to better advantage for some time, and his sermon made a deep impression on the minds of his hearers. The collection was for the benefit of the families of deceased. A catafalque draped with black and white was erected in the chancel, and other indications of
