It is besides a naturally strongly fortified place. The rebels are now on both sides of the river and determined to resist to the last. Riel, it is said, intends to put his pris-oners in the front at Batoche's Crossing, so that we shall kill them with our fire. The rebels have dug rifle pits along both banks of the river and at every point of advantage.

It is considered extraordinary that nothing has been heard from Col. Irvine, who, with his 300 police, should be able to do something to lighten our task. Lieut. It is reported that they are arranging a plan of attack on this place, but as there is only a couple of hundred of them without reinforcements we are not very much afraid, although they might give us some trouble. Already the wire between here and Touchwood has been cut, so that communi-cation with the Fort by wire is interrupted and nothing can be heard from Middleton or Col. Otter for some days. An effort will be made to remedy the trouble. Reports have come in stating that both halfbreeds and Indians celebrated the Fish Creek fight as a rebel victory. The dangers are that the rebels will keep up a system of guerills warfare, which will be extremely difficult to meet. The country will have to be overrun with cavalry and crack shots at that.
