Without this the attractions of all the natural beauty imaginable will not draw the outside world. We were given to understand that a new hotel was one of the things projected for next summer, and it will be a good thing for Paris if built sufficiently commodious and is run on right principles. Nature has given another attraction in the "sulphur spring." This was discovered during the time of the oil excitement, when boring for oil. After persevering until 1000 feet in depth was reached they concluded they were not on the right formation for oil. Instead, however, they got a flowing well of mineral water, which has been analyzed and pronounced to have medicinal properties equal to many of the famous waters on the other side of the line.

If some enterprising Yankee had hold of this which has been analyzed and pronounced to have medicinal properties equal to many of the famous waters on the other side of the line. If some enterprising Yankee had hold of this he would shange everything as if by the wave of a magic wand. Up would go the big hotel; modesty would not stand in the way of making the attractions of the place known, and them—but we leave the imagination to conjure up the gay crowds, excursions, band-playing, boating, piculcing, etc., which would follow. The geological formation here is said to be something similar to that at Paris, France; that is contiguous to the beds of gypsum or plaster of Paris, hence its name. The gypsum is found in the bluffs and knolls around, and mining was at one time extensively engaged in. It is generally about 90 feet below the surface, and tunnels were driven from the surface, and tunnels were driven from the sides of the hills. It is calculated that there iddes of the hills. The first settlement was made in 1821, and it gree who when the flocal market get a good deal of was incorporated as a village. After this first progress was more rapid and in 1856 it assumed the position and dignity of a town.

The Paris of to-day is an invising and prospertous looking place and as there is yet a good deal of water power not yet utilised its future capabilities are very great. The business part is well tuilt up with excellent brick buildings, and we venture to say that no town of its suce has as many beautiful residences, many of their elegant mansions, as are to be street on the neights leading towards the station.
