For the Favorite.

"IMPROMPTU."

Never give way to repining, Brood not over the thankless Past; Darkest clouds have a silvery lining, The Future's unbounded and vast.

Life's al! too fleeting for sorrow, The Prosent is ours alone. Action let pledge the To-morrow,— To-morrow take one of the own !

What if we gain not the laurel And royal bay-leaf of the bard, Shall we then foolishly quarrel, And call our being "ill-starr'd?"

No—tweet poor antistaction.
To quarrel with any at all;
The height of desperate action,
Ourselves then out with to fall!

MONTERAL, 28th Fob., 1878,

For the Fagorita.

"Where the Laugh came in."

BY IBABELLA VALANOY ORAWFORD, OF PETERBORO', ONT

"Ob, of course!" roared Buffalo, " rou're pretty fellows! Know a lot about its aign't you? Oh, of course!" an! Buffalo whistled like Borean through the rigging of an old-fashioned man-orthrough the rigging of an old-fashioned man-ol-war, in whistle expressive of contempt and defance, and then glared, and smorted at White fier and myself his bossim. Stends, untui Whimer's toy-terrier thrust distinged out of his cost-pocket, in which spot hegotierally boarded, and barked defining back again.

"You're a pretty fellow!" retorted Whimer, excludity, "you're a donkey!" and Whimer, strew his cight into the ashatand, and rusing, syed Buffiel all over, [bertiming at the Hyperion ouris of his classic head, and ending at the toe of his boot. He laughed a short sardonic laugh.

"Try it by all menns," he said, "but don't express sympathy when you're cacked. Daisy Darlington, indeed!"

"And why not Daisy Darlington, sir "in-

"And why not Daisy Darlington, sir ?" in-culred Buffslo with a with politoness, but per-tage you have some ideas in the direction your-life.

'Perhaps I have," said Whiffler, coolly. "I'm not a possillors scamp of a reporter " and the shominable snot sneered up into Suffalo's stage, and rathed some loose silver in his pocket-"Open the door, Jackson !" said Bullido, eye-ing Whiller with his head lowered in that posiang winner with his head lowered in that posi-tion which had gained him his soubriques. I never liked Whimer, and though I tried to feel a Christian distante to aiding in Buffalo's project, that door managed to get open extremo-ly fast.

"Now, you pitiful little cur," said Buffalo. "Now, you pitiful little on;" said Buffalo, insping his hand on the little collar of Whiffer's radileges little cout, and awinging him clear off the ground, while his little logs fluttered in the sir, "Pil help you downstairs in a swinking!" and with a couple of strides Buffalo reaemed the jobby, and quietly dropped Whiffer over the Dannisters into the hall below.

Whiffer deried through the air like a motoor, and whiffer deried through the air like a motoor, Whinfer deried through the air like a moteer, and alighted on the teatray which him. Bordwell was carrying into the dining-room. There was a portid yell, a clatter as of a mousand bother walking a chins-shop, and Whinfer reposed on the floor in the midst of Mrs. Bordwell's best teatervice,—his little head in the glophasin—the Gream-ewer inverted on his chosts.

"Lews " said Buffalo, trying to back notes-lessly got of sight "I've done it now, and no result dos a agent mitale!"

"You're the most ungratefulest creeter, Mr. Anter, se ever drawed the breath of life!" cried Mrs. Bordwell, looking up as Bunkio, and begin-The Bordwell, looking up as Buildio, and bogun-ming to dissolve in toars. "A-droppin of genut-ment only my best charne, when, goodness knows! time an' again i'vo went by this the coal-scattle, which unbreakable it is, an' you should up Your collars, an' fronts myself, registr, an' not sparin' to put starch an the feelin's of a mother into the job in "Mr. Whimer, sir, are you dead?"

"MR. WHIFFER AND TROUNCER."

fragments, and giaring up at Bucklo. Oh:
I'm not dead, thank you! As I shall let some people know to their cost!"
The little serpent had a very deadly eye as he said this, and looked almost tragic as he got up said this, and looked aimost tragic as no got up and walked away to his room.

"I'm almost sorry I did it!" said Buffalo, thoughtfully. "He's Datay's cousin, you know !" "Cousin, or no cousin," meaned Mrs. Bord. well, "you've ruinated the chayna my uncle well, "you've ruinated the chayna my uncle Jerry giv me the very day me an' Bordwell was married, an' ever value it special, did me an' Bordwell, because the cream-jug favored poor uncle Jerry's figure to a T, an' we never had a neighbor in to a cup of tes, without, as you may say, davin' poor uncle Jerry called an afore an, like a spirit from his nice cak comin with plated handles."

"I'm sure I'm very sorry, Mrs. Bordwell," plated handles,"

"I'm sure I'm very sorry, Mrs. Bordwell," said Buffalo meekly, "but when a follow's temper is up even cream pots with a family likeness are likely to suffer. I'll make it all likeness are likely to suffer. I'll make it all light with you, though!"

"That I'm aweer of, Mr. Anxer," said Mrs.
Bordwell graciously. "Bays I to Miss Daisy only yesterday. "This much I will say, that whatever Mr. Anxer's little failin's may be, which none of us is born Augels or Marthas, by which she meant martyrs; his spirituous part is munificent, an' such a thing as carryin' over in washin' bills unknown."

"Woll, and what did she say?" said Buffalo, leaning his mane of jetty curls over the bannisters, and reddening furiously from his respiendent tie to the exquisite parting of his ambrosiai looks.

"4Ab, Russn' says the sweet meaning then'."

"hop sparing to not starch on the feeling of said looks.
"Ab, Sussan, says the sweet crostur, 'isn't it shill looks.
"Ab, Sussan, says the sweet crostur, 'isn't it shill looks.
"Ab, Sussan, says the sweet crostur, 'isn't it shill looks.
"Ab, Sussan, says the sweet crostur, 'isn't it shill looks.
"Ab, Sussan, says the sweet crostur, 'isn't it shill looks.
"Ab, Sussan, says the sweet crostur, 'isn't it shill looks.
"Ab, Sussan, says the sweet crostur, 'isn't it shill looks.
"Ab, Sussan, says the sweet crostur, 'isn't it shill looks.
"Ab, Sussan, says the sweet crostur, 'isn't it shill looks.
"Ab, Sussan, says the sweet crostur, 'isn't it shill looks.
"Ab, Sussan, says the sweet crostur, 'isn't it shill looks.
"Ab, Sussan, says the sweet crostur, 'isn't it shill looks.
"Ab, Sussan, says the sweet crostur, 'isn't it shill looks.
"Ab, Sussan, says the sweet crostur, 'isn't it shill looks.
"Ab, Sussan, says the sweet crostur, 'isn't it shill looks.
"Ab, Sussan, says the sweet crostur, 'isn't it shill looks.
"Ab, Sussan, says the sweet crostur, 'isn't it shill looks.
"Ab, Sussan, says the sweet crostur, 'isn't it shill looks.
"Ab, Sussan, says the sweet crostur, 'isn't it shill looks.
"Ab, Sussan, says the sweet crostur, 'isn't it shill looks.
"Ab, Sussan, says the sweet crostur, 'isn't it shill looks.
"Ab, Sussan, says the sweet crostur, 'isn't it shill looks."
"Ab, Sussan, says the sweet crostur, 'isn't it shill looks."
"Ab, Sussan, says the sweet crostur, 'isn't it shill looks."
"Ab, Sussan, says the sweet crostur, 'isn't it shill looks."
"Ab, Sussan, says the sweet crostur, 'isn't it shill looks."
"Ab, Sussan, says the sweet crostur, 'isn't it shill looks."
"Ab, Sussan, says the sweet crostur, 'isn't it shill looks."
"Ab, Sussan, says the sweet crostur, 'isn't it shill looks."
"Ab, Sussan, says the sweet crostur, 'isn't it shill looks."
"Ab, Sussan, says the sweet crostur, 'isn't it shill looks."
"Ab, Sussan, says the sweet crostur, 'isn't it shill looks."
"Ab, Sussan, says the sweet crostur, 'isn't it shill looks Oh! way he drinks and gambles, out the 100ks (as 1-way he drinks and gambles, but the looks tax is he meant to be good, says sha."

"Did she say that?" said Buffalo, looking wistfully down at good Mrs. Bordwell, as she sai on the oil-cloth vainly trying to piece the memento of uncie Jerry.

"That she did!" said Mrs. Bordwell, "an' the answer i made her was: 'Miss Daisy, long before you was thought of, or me comin' to nurse you, an' meetin' Bordwell, an' us goin' into the hondity'-house ine. I nursed Mrs. Buck Anxer you, an' meetin' Bordwell, au' us goin' into the boardin'-bouse line, I nursed Mr. Dick Anxer bringin' him up by hand, which his poor ms died the day he was born, an' a gooder young man, except when led astray by them as might be called Winfler, or might be called Winfler, or might be called Jackson, never was wrapped in cotton waddin, which small he was, though no one would believe it now, to look at you, Mt. Dickey, my dear!"

Buffulo smiled piacidly at his expansive chest and pulled that moustages, which i never could and pulled that moustaone, which I never coult see any beauty in (for, to my mind, it looked exactly like what my grand-aunt Tabitha called her "monkey-skin tippet"), and turned to me.

"Come, Jack," said he, "lot's go up town I want to look up some china for Mrs. Bord well," woll."

"An' if you could carry the shape of the creaming in your mind's eye, Mr. Anxer, called out the worthy matron, "which uncom mon bulky for its height it was, I'd take it kind of you, for feeling at feeling, an' not so much a logiograph of my poor, dear uncle Jerry is the house."

"All eight !" more out Buffelo, in high coo.

the house."

All right!" sang out Buffalo, in high good humor. "Come along, Jack!" and off he swaggered, followed by his dog Trouncor, a sweet animal, as black as a coal, and with a white

A synopsis of Trouncer's traits of character cours somewhere in the Poets. "Bilent and sure as the stars in the sky." He didn't bark much, bill he was very sure inleed to bite, on which account he generally look the air with his ness done carefully up in about a mile of leather straps, frightening old ladies with satchols, and young ladies with beaux into inclpient hysterics, and was only allowed full liberty of coots when there were plenty of bones at hand to distract his attention from the human subject. Did I like Trouncer? Not much, but he liked me a great dear, especially about the caives.

China! No, we never thought of such a thing, for in the distance Buffillo espled a blue volvet suit, and a very ourly white feather, tripping down the street which he swore, at the distance down the street which he swore, at the distance of a good haif mile, to contain the lovely person of Miss Daisy Darlington, while behind her walked a little foot-page, carrying her skates, the latter outhful being, biazing like a constellation with glit buttons.

"I'm off!" I said, as soon as this vision burst upon us. "Buttons can play gooseberry!"

"The deuce he can!" exclaimed Buffalo pitoously, "don't leave me, there's a good fellow!"

Now Miss Daisy Darlington's golden head reached to somewhere in the neighborhood of my friend's elbow, and her general appearance was that of a modest, blue-eyed dove, but novertheless, at the remotest flutter of her dainty raiment, at the most distant tunkle of her fresh little volte, Buffalo's heart sank within him, and he required the moral support of such a nature as mine, to carry him through an interview with his divinity oreditably. By Jove! what idiots fellows in love are, to be sure! I never have been in that radiculous state, and never mean to be, except with my-self. Now Miss Daisy Darlington's golden head self.

"How do you do, Mr. Jackson?" said Daisy,
"How do you do, Mr. Jackson?" said Daisy, "and oh! is that you, Mr. Anxer?

"How do you do, Mr. Jackson " said maisy, "and oh! is that you, Mr. Anxer? What a lovely day it is!"

"Yes, Miss Darlington," said Buffaio, desporately trying to say something, "Ah-u! What a lovely day it is, Miss Darlington."

"So it is," said Dalay streetly. "I ve been down to the rink skating. Pape is away in the country at grandma's, and I felt so ionely at home with only aunty."

"Do you think, Miss Darlington," I said with ready tact, "that your estimable anni wound tike a very charming little poodio I know of? No bigger than a muff I assure you."

"Oh, so much!" said Dalay, "Adonis died of apoplemy a week ago, and poor, dear anniy misses him so much you can't think."

"I'll bring him to-night," I said resolutely, "or, if I can't come myself, Mr. Anner, while bring him I'm sure, won't you Dick!"

Of course he would I and white Dalay tripped off duly attended by her little fool-page, who of duly attended by her little foot-page, who though small was obese, and from whom Trouncer parted with many a backward glance of tender regret, and much dewy glastening of his muziked nose, Buffalo and I went on our way rejoicing.

"I'll stand you a champagne supper for that, said Buffalo, gratefully, "the old dad away and a tite-d-tite with Daisy! Delicious! I'll pop to-a Med-Me with Daily! Deficions! I'll pop to-night. The old chap can't hate me worse than he does, and as for Daily..."

Buffalo, (we having arrived at home,) looked in the hall glass, and smiled sweetly.

"I'll make it all square to-night before that sneak Whiffler has a change of making mis-chief."

I might ave been mistaken, but I shought I I might are been mistaken, but I thought I saw a straw-colored head suddonly pop cock from poering over the bennisters in the upper regions. I don't think I was, though, for Trounger with the speed of light, (from the dog-star of course), glided unobatusively up the stairs. There was the sound of rapidly retreating feet, the soft closing of a door, and Trouncer reappeared, with an air or melancholy resignation, and seated himself sorrowing on the doormat.

"Good Trouncer I" said Buffalo, benignly, "he shall come and pay a visit to a little angel, to-night."

Trouncer mede an effort to lick his onops, as his amble tall in bensiae surinibation of the part purely of the mage sheenjaring as to the bennitar plants in a manufacture of the mage sheenjaring as to the bennitar process.

treat.

I have reason to believe that Miss Daisy and her annt Julis, received Buiklo with, sa the papers say, "distinguished consideration!" Cupid, the peodie, was pronounced a gem, and tully occupied aunty's attention which, added to the joyful fact that she were as deaf as a