

SECTION VIII.—Garrison devotes himself more assiduously to lecturing—His mental gifts as an orator—Growth of the abolition movement—Its effect on the politicians—The Liberator opposed to the movement becoming political—J. G. Birney organizes the Liberty Party and becomes its candidate for the Presidency—The Churches in relation to the anti-slavery crusade—The Bible and American slavery..... 93

SECTION IX.—Garrison breaks with the Churches—Bids farewell to orthodox Christianity—Embraces Woman's Rights and asserts the political equality of the sexes—Comes under the influence of J. Humphrey Noyes—Is attracted by Perfectionism and espouses the doctrine of Non-Resistance—Imports both into the columns of the Liberator—Dismay of his friends—Condemns Lovejoy for defending himself against his assassins—Abolitionism fears being compromised by Garrison's heresies—Defection of some of his friends—The schism affects the Liberator, and displays itself in the two chief anti-slavery societies—The leadership in dispute—Garrison confirmed in the leadership..... 105

SECTION X.—Garrison attends the World's Convention in London—English prejudice against women delegates—Success of the Convention—Gratifying reception in England—Redmond, the negro delegate—Turn of the tide in America—Abolitionism gathers strength—Garrison's poetic effusions—Discussion of the Sabbath question—The Liberator exonerates himself from the charge of infidelity..... 121

SECTION XI.—“Moral Ploughshares”—Attacks on the clergy—Temperance and other moral movements—Ireland's appeal against slavery in the United States—Defection of the Irish in America—Kossuth and Father Mathew disappoint the Abolitionists in their attitude towards slavery—Further visit to Britain—Disruption in the Scottish Church—Garrison deprecates the Free Church of Scotland taking money from the Southern Presbyterians—He declares for the dissolution of the Union—Slavery and the Constitution—“The irrepressible conflict”—Union with slaveholders characterised as a “covenant with death and an agreement with hell”—The Liberator's No-Government theory breaks down—Accompanied by Fred. Douglass, Garrison carries the torch of conscience into