distinguished guests of the city of Chicago.

The day was fine, and the line of march was jammed with spectators, windows, roofs and every available space where a touthold could be secured being occupied. The parade began to form as the ceremonies of laying the corner stone of the reactan Building were being concluded. At the conclusion of the corner stone ceremonies Mr. McKlinley and the Presidential party, with other distinguished visitors, were escorted to the Union League Club, where they partook of a hurried inucheon. The members of the Presidential party were then driven to their piaces in the line.

The carriage containing the Premier of Canada and members of the Reception Committee occupied a place in the parade immediately after the Grand Army of the Republic and veterans of the ex-Confederates. Then came a guard of honor, sixteen cavalrymen, and carriages containing officers accompanying Premier Laurier and members of the Citizens' Committee came next.

I may be pardoned if I recall that instance us a very deep and sincere affection. I may be pardoned if I recall that instance because I have to speak of myself. In the month of June last I spoke on the floor of the House of Commons of Canada on the question of Alaska, and I enunciated the very obvious truism that international problems can be settled in one of two ways only, either by arbitration or by war. And, although I proceeded to say immediately that war betkeen Great Britain and the United States would be criminal and would not be thought of for
