TO KEEP THEMSELVES.

Ontario's Feeble-Minded Will Go Into the Produce Industry.

The feeble folk of Ontario, who reside in asylums and institutes, maintained by the Provincial Government are rapidly approaching a condition of self-support. For some time progress in this direction has been materialized, but it is now understood that a new movement, broad enough in scope to include all the institutions in all parts of the province is being worked up by Hon. W. J. Hanna, and some of his lieutenants. One of the predominant features is the speedy organizing of a canning system, adequate to produce enough products to serve all the needs of the 8,000 old ersons who are confined in these places. All the necessary supplies will be drawn from the fields and orchards now being cultivated on Government land.

This idea of erecting canning factories and preserving fruits and vegetables is not altogether a new venture for the Ontario Government. In connection with the London Asylum for the Insane, a small plant has been in operation for years and has solved the question of winter supplies with marked success, though on a much larger scale and to distribute the benefits to all.

The far-reaching nature of the proposal has involved a tremendous amount of detailed planning and the accurate rating of the crops of the institutions from year to year in order to understand the demands of the plants and the yielding power of the sources of supply. A careful analysis of the crop returns from farms under operation this year, is believed to have convinced S. E. Todd, provincial farm director, that the idea is highly feasible, and that the resources in soil fertility, in beef and fruits and vegetables, will permit of the launching of the system at an early date.

Another important question, which naturally faces the government in approaching the matter, is the actual amount of food consumed by each institution. The department has had to get in touch with the more housewifely duties of the matrons of each home and a detailed report of the number of cans of each edible which would be used under ordinary circumstances, has been obtained. The list and variety of fruits and vegetables now grown in connection with the institutions for defectives, and the prison farm is somewhat amazing in its scope, and the excellence of the product has been attested by exhibition at fall fairs, where their presence has called forth admiration.

In addition to the venture in the field of preserving, it is probable that a more serious attempt will be made to render the institutions completely independent as regards dairy and beef supplies. The actual figures of the number of pounds of milk, butter and cheese are already in the hands of the department together with the amount of meat annually consumed and the rate of consumption.

The success of the Government crops for the season, bespeaks the success of the enterprise planned. From every quarter the reports have been most encouraging and in many cases record crops have been gathered. Next season the agricultural end of the work will be pushed with great vigor. Extensive tile operations are already under way.

The plan of the Government as shown merely displays another phase of the work now being done in brickmaking and building at the various farms. The supplies are at hand, and by organizations are turned to good account of the inmates who enjoy a double profit from the industry.

A Joke on Mr. Judge.

One of the best known theatrical men in Canada is Mr. H. C. Judge, of Montreal, one of a trio of enterprising managers who are bringing English actors out to tour Canada. His friends are telling a little joke on Mr Judge, in connection with the recent coming of the well-known comedian, Lawrence Brough. Just before Mr. Brough was due to sail for Canada Mr. Judge left Montreal for a fishing trip on Lake Champlain. A day or so later he was informed over the wire by his secretary that a cable had arrived from Mr. Brough. It read: "Arrange substitute. Arrested for love in a railway train. Brough."

Mr. Judge was worried. He rushed to Montreal and saw his partner, Mr. Horsfall.

"Oh, that's all right," remarked Horsfall cheerily. "That is a reply to my cable from New York, suggesting that Mr. Brough put on alternative curtain-raisers to 'The Lady of Ostend.' It means we are to change the announcements to read that 'Arrested' will be given instead of 'Love in a Railway Train!' Don't you see it?"

Less Loss of Life This Year.

Statistics of the Dominion Marine Department on the navigation now closing will show a considerable decrease in the number of lives lost on Canadian coastal or inland waters.

At the beginning of the season new regulations in regard to steamboat inspection and devices for the safety of passengers and crews were adopted, and it is believed that they are a large factor in the diminished toll of lives.

Still Yielding Gold.

The famous creeks of Atlin, B.C., still yield their gold, miners say, and as proof they point to the fact that the past year has been the best in gold production there since 1899. It is claimed that one man working on a quartz claim there made three clean-ups during the past summer, taking $71,000, $52,000 and $31,000 respectively.

Sociologist Defined.

"Uncle Henry, what is a sociologist?"

"A sociologist, my boy, is a person who can inspect a garbage can and find enough material in it for a long lecture on the needs of society."

Just Suppose!

And let this supposition point to a stern reality. Just suppose that your store, or your building and its contents were all of a sudden to be wiped out by fire: Would you be able to rebuild and replace? And even if you were, wouldn't it cripple you pretty badly? Many have been crippled and financially ruined by this destructive element. Every alarm of Fire causes consternation in the minds of the uninsured. Why go uninsured? Protection in the ACADIA FIRE is not high, and should a loss occur adjustment is prompt and fair.

For over half a century, the ACADIA FIRE has unfalteringly and unfailingly lived up to its obligations, relieving the assured of all distress as far as in its power lay, by paying dollar for dollar, and without cash discount for losses incurred.

IN THE DARK.

Midnight brooded weird and lone;
Nothing broke the wintry gloom,
Save the drowsy monotone
Of the clock, as one by one,
From its steady hands the minutes fell into my silent room.

Close beside the larger bed,
Stood the cradle in its place;
'Mid the blankets softly spread,
Lay the baby's golden head,
And his light breath, coming, going, gently fanned against my face.

Something in the darkness stirred,
Warmly nestling at my side
Like a little sleepy bird,
"Mamma"—very low the word;
Hush and darkness made the narrow space between us seem so wide.

Then I murmured, as he lay,
"Mamma's close beside you, dear,
Soon the night will go away,
By and by it will be day;
In the morning, when my baby wakens, mamma will be here."

Wandering fingers toward me crept;
"Mamma, let me hold your hand,"
Clasping it, he soothed and slept;
Clasping his, I could have wept
Humbled by that perfect trust which needed not to understand.

Years have passed me by since then;
Long the little bed has stood
Empty, silent; yet, again,
Thrilling deeper than my pain,
Comes the tender voice to banish every bitter doubting mood.

Through the voiceless hush of death,
Through life's midnight dark and dim,
Turning unto Christ, who saith
To each asking soul, "Have faith,"
Heavenward I reach my longing, groping human hand to Him.

Does He take them? Ay, He does!
All the chasm, deep and wide,
Spanning by His love that flows
Freely for all human woes,
I shall wake in heaven's bright morning with my baby by my side.

The Siege of the Seven Suitors

BY MEREDITH NICHOLSON.

Copyright, 1910, by Meredith Nicholson.

"She's plausible enough, but she's the past mistress of ulterior motive. She got Fortner, the mural painter, up to a place she used to have at Newport a few years ago, ostensibly to do a frieze or something, and she made him teach her to fire a gun. You know Fortner, with his artistic ideals! And he didn't know any more about guns than a flea. It was droll, decidedly droll. But she kept him there a month—wouldn't let him off the reservation; but she paid him his fee just the same, though he never painted a stroke. When he got back to town he was a wreck. It was just like being in jail. I warn you to let her alone if you should undertake to fix her flues she's likely to put you to work digging potatoes. She's no end of a case."

"Well, Wiggins is a good fellow, one of the very best," I remarked, as I absorbed these revelations, "and it isn't the girl's aunt he wants to marry."

"There's no telling where this affair may lead Wiggins. There's something queer in the wind, all right. The chevalier has brother Bassford where he can't whimper. I rather fancy he feeds from her hand. His girls haven't any prospects except through the chevalier. Nice girls, so I'm told. Miss Cecilia Hollister is living with her aunt."

"And the other sister—where does she come in?"

"Not important, I fancy. Rumor is silent touching her. In fact I've never heard anything of her. But this Cecilia is no end handsome and proud. Poor old Wiggy!"

I was already ashamed of myself for having encouraged Jewett to discuss Wiggins' affairs, and was about to leave him, when he snorted in a disagreeable way he had at some joke that had occurred to him.

"I knew there was something," he said, "about Miss Cecilia's younger sister, and I've just recalled it. The girl has a most extraordinary name, quite the most remarkable you ever heard. Hezekiah! Bang! That's the little sister's name. Bassford Hollister had been saving that name for a son, who never appeared, to do honor to old Hezekiah, the perambulator chap. So they named the girl for her grandad."

I left him and learned at the office that Wiggins had, within half an hour, left the club hurriedly in a cab, taking a trunk with him. He had mentioned no mail address to the clerk, and this was very unlike Wiggins.

CHAPTER II.

The Beginning of My Adventure.

WIGGINS' strange conduct and Jewett's dark hints so disturbed me that the very next afternoon I again sought the Asolando tea room, feeling that in its atmosphere I might best weigh the few facts I possessed touching my friend's love affairs.

Those who care for details in these matters may be interested to know that the Asolando is tucked away among print shops and exclusive haberdashers, a stone's throw from Fifth avenue. The Asolando tea room is sacred to wooers of the flute of Pan, secession photographers and confident believers in an early revival of the poetic drama. There is about the little room a suggestion of tranquillity, of charming colonial peace, with its arts and crafts chairs and tables, its racks of books, its portraits of Browning, Rossetti, Burne-Jones and kindred spirits.

I chose a table, sat down and suggested (one does not order at the Asolando) a few articles from the card an attendant handed me.

"We're out of the Paracelsus ginger cookies," she replied, "but I recommend a Ruskin sandwich with our own special chocolate. The whipped cream is unusually fine today."

She eyed me with a severity to which I was not accustomed, and I acquiesced without parley in her suggestion. Before leaving me she placed on my table the latest minor poet in green and gold.

It was nearly 3 o'clock, and I was alone in the Asolando. The attending deities in their snowy gowns had vanished behind the screen at the rear of the room. The food and drink with which I had been promptly served proved excellent. Even the minor poet in green and gold had held my attention, though imitations of Coventry Patmore's odes bore me as a rule. Near the street, half concealed behind a mosquelike grill, sat the cashier, reading. A bundle of joss sticks in a green jar beside this young woman sent a thin smoke into the air. Her head was bent above her book in quiet attention. The light from an electric lamp made a glow of her golden hair. She was an incident of the general picture, a part of a scene that contained no jarring note. A man who could devise, in the heart of the great city, a place so instinct with repose so lulling to all the senses was not less than a public benefactor.

It was at this moment that the adventure—for it shall have no meaner name—actually began. My eyes were still enjoying the Rossettilike vision in the cashier's tiny booth when a figure suddenly darkened the street door just beyond her. The girl lifted her head. On the instant the lamp key clicked as she extinguished her light, and the aureoled head ceased to be. And coming toward me down the shop I beheld a lady, a lady of years, who passed the cashier's desk with her eyes intent upon the room's inner recesses. Her gown, of a new fashionable gray, was of the severest tailor cut. Her hat was a modified fedora, gray like the gown, and adorned with a single gray feather. She was short, slight, erect, and moved with a quick birdlike motion, pausing and glancing at the vacant tables that lay between me and the door. She appeared to be engaged in a calculation of some sort, and she raised a lorgnette to assist her in counting the tables. The cashier passed behind her unseen and vanished. I heard the newcomer reciting:

"I beg your pardon, but this seems to be the seventh table."

"One, two, three, four, five, six, seven." And at seven her eyes rested upon me with a look that mingled surprise and annoyance. She took a step toward me, and I started to rise, but she said quickly:

"I beg your pardon, but this seems to be the seventh table."

"Now that you call my attention to it," I remarked, gaining my feet, "I am bound to concede the point. If by any chance I am intruding"—

"Not in the least. On the other hand, I beg that you remain where you are." And without further ado she sank into a chair opposite my own.

I tinkled a tiny crystal bell that was among the table furnishings, and a waitress appeared and handed the lady, who had thus introduced herself to my acquaintance, a copy of the tiny card on which the articles of refreshment offered by the Asolando were indicated within a border of hand painted field daisies.

"Never mind that," said the lady in gray, ignoring the card. "You may bring me a caviar sandwich and a cocktail, a pink one, provided—provided"—and she held the waitress with her eye—"you have the imported caviar and your barkeeper knows the proper frappe of the spirit lifter I have named."

"Pardon me, madam," replied the waitress icily, "but you have mistaken the place. The Asolando serves nothing stronger than the pure water of its own fount of Castalia. Intoxicants are not permitted here."

"Intoxicants!" repeated the old lady with asperity. "Do I look like a person given to intoxication? I dare say your Castalia water is nothing but Croton whose flavor has been destroyed by distillation. You may bring me the sandwich I have mentioned and with it a pot of tea. Yes, thank you; lemon with the tea."

As the girl vanished with the light tread that marked the service of the place I again made as to rise, but the old lady lifted her hand with a delaying gesture.

"Pray remain. It is not unlikely that we have friends and ideas in common, and as you were seated at the seventh table it is possible that some ordering of fate has brought us together."

She took from me in the hand which she had now ungloved the copy of my minor poet, glanced at it scornfully and tossed it upon the floor with every mark of disdain.

"What species of mental disorder does this place represent?" she demanded.

"It is sacred to the fine arts apparently; an endowed tea room where persons of artistic ideals may come to refresh body and soul. Such at least seems to be the program. This is only my second visit, but I have long heard it spoken of by artists, poets and others of my friends."

"I am sixty-two years old, young man, and I beg to inform you that I consider the Asolando the most preposterous thing I have ever heard of in this most preposterous city. And from a casual glimpse of you I feel justified in saying that a man in your apparent physical health might be in better business than frequenting in midafternoon a shop that seems to be a remarkably stupid expression of twentieth century anaemia."

"Attendance here is not compulsory," I remarked defensively.

"If you imply that I must have sought the place voluntarily let me correct your false impression immediately. I dropped in here for the excellent reason that this shop is the seventh in numerical progression from Fifth avenue."

"You were not guided by any feeling of interest, then, but rather by superstition?"

"That remark is unworthy of a man of your apparent intelligence. I was born on the 7th of November, and all the great events of my life have occurred on the 7th of the month."

"Maritime Preferred."

Every investor in the Maritime Provinces knows that this refers to the Preferred shares of the Maritime Telegraph and Telephone Company. To come at once to the point, these shares have been held in high regard by the more careful investors and at the present time, when investors are becoming more discriminating, it is found that the demand for these shares is even larger.

We offer a block in lots to suit purchasers at 104, or $10.40 per share.
