

happenings of the Week

SAY KING OF SAXONY MAY
WED PRINCESS HILDEGARDE

KING OF SAXONY.

While there has been no official announcement made of it yet, it is currently reported that King Frederick Augustus of Saxony is contemplating marrying one of the six daughters of King Ludwig of Bavaria. He is said to have already confided to friends that he is to marry the Princess Hildegard, who is thirty-two years old. It is believed that in order to make his marriage possible King Frederick will renounce the Catholic religion, as the Pope has twice refused to sanction his remarriage.

The mild and unseasonable weather of the past weeks makes it difficult to realize that in two weeks Christmas will be a thing of the past and citizens will have begun to settle down to regular routine, after a month of busy preparations for the celebration of the most important festival of the year.

Hostesses this week have nevertheless found time for the entertainment of friends and after the weariness of a day of shopping in crowded city stores, their hospitality has been appreciated by many of those fortunate enough to be included among the guests.
