'Fright drug' being used on prisoners

Over 150 persons at two California state prison hospitals have been injected with a 'fright drug' which gives a person a feeling that they are about to die. The technique, called aversion therapy, is designed to frighten 'troublesome patients', according to Dr. Sterling Morgan, superintendent of the Atascadero mental hospital.

The drug used, called succinylcholine, for which no one volunteered in the last 18 months, is a muscle relaxant that temporarily paralyzes the body making it unable to breathe or move for as long as two minutes. A prison doctor sits beside the patient 'scolding him for his behavior and urging him to think before he acts', according to UPI.

News briefs

Applications still open

Those still interested in applying for summer jobs at Ontario Place will have to deal directly with the Department of Trade and Development. Government officials report they cannot handle the number of people who have now applied.

All those who applied will have their applications considered and may be called for interviews by the department.

All those who still wish to apply may write the department for applications forms.

No further recruitment on the York campus is now planned.

Meeting to discuss grades

York Faculty of Arts Council will hold an open meeting today to discuss grades and the recent decision of the Applications and Memorials Committee on ungraded courses.

All are invited to room S915 Ross building at 4:30 p.m.

Robberies up in Montreal

MONTREAL (CUPI)

As tight Montreal security gradually relaxes following the political kidnappings by the Front de Liberation du Quebec the underworld is getting back to its workday routine.

For a three week period in the "hold-up capital of Canada" bank robberies were down 75% and smaller crimes were almost nonexistent, according to police.

Last week however, everything "broke loose", said Det.-Lt. Guy Goudreau of the Criminal Investigation Bureau.

In the past ten days bandits have accumulated more than $300,000 in four hold-ups, three of them in Montreal, while the fourth was in Quebec City.

Although extraordinary police activity in recent weeks was not directed against ordinary criminals at the height of the crisis, police had roadblocks at times on all bridges leading from Montreal to the South and North Shores. Spot checks were instigated and any car could be stopped and searched.

What should you expect from a tampon?

Freedom. Comfort. Convenience. A silken-smooth applicator for correct insertion. Ease of removal. Complete protection. Safety. Security. A removal cord that's chain stitched the entire length of the tampon. Easy disposal. And choice of three absorbency-sizes.

If you're not getting all of this, you're not using Tampax tampons. Maybe you should give them a try.
