TWO

THE WILD BIRDS OF KILLEEVY

BY ROSA MULHOLLAND (LADY GILBERT)

CHAPTER XIX

THE OLD LORD WILL HAVE HIS WAY Lord Wilderspin's letter caused great commotion behind the little bric-a-brac shop. Mrs. Wynch was lost in wonder at the idea of her little maid having been turned into the protegee of a lord. rather "I shall never contradict you the p again, Manzelle," she said; "not feel that I am going to have much chance in future, but I wouldn't do it now, not if I could. There must be some kind of a blindness about me that I couldn't see something about the child that other people the storied furniture and adornsee. But you'll have it all your own way after this."

The signora herself was thrown phere which she was to breathe, the into a state of agitation that was not all happiness. She was one of those persons who cannot feel unmixed joy at anything that hap-pens in life. Change always brought her pain, and in spite of her delight at Fan's success, and at the nice discernment shown by Fate in making a favorite of the child, e felt at first as much dismay as pleasure in preparing to leave her own toilsome and precarious life in look that Fanchea was alarmed. London for ease, security, and the conditions of peace. Things that had long been a trouble to her, such as the noise in the streets, and which she could not afford to improve upon, grew dear to her all at once, and became invested with store, and became invested with involve upon way. There are the things I brought with me, you know; and I will live in my own nest, and only the dinginess of her apartment, poetry, directly they were about to become part of the past. Like all who are of the same backward-looking nature, she needed a shake make her know her own mind and realize the advantage of a fortunate change. Matter - of - fact at dinner. The thought of meeting Mrs. Wynch, taking her little the great musician agitated her Mrs. Wynch, taking her little the great musician agitated her mournful plaints literally, adminis- much more than the prospect of tered the slight shock which in this encountering his lordship had done. nstance set her right.

me?" she cried.

"I'm sure I never knew you were so fond of the place, Mamzelle," she said, quite flattered, "and if which had belonged to her mother, you are sorry to go, why I am sorry to lose a good lodger. That old lord is so accustomed to have his own way that he never thinks of what it is to other people to have their lives routed about and everything changed. But I think if you wrote and put it to him, he would easily find somebody else to take of our little maid; and you could run down in the train sometimes to see how she gets on, you know

The signora opened her eyes wide and stared at her landlady, and instantly knew that she was long-ing to get under Lord Wilderspin's roof. And though she continued to sigh a good deal as she packed up her things, she made no more articulate complaints.

Nothing of her possessions could she bring herself to part with ; and in the end she set out encumbered with large packing cases, the con-tents of which were, for the most part, destined to form contribu-part, to the collection in the lum-

When, however, she found herself brought them here together that out of their ruins he might build a fair temple for his own contentin his lordship's carriage, rolling through his blooming park, and when she saw Fanchea, in a pretty ment and the delight of the world. brown linen dress with crimson As they stood talking, each with a ribbons, flying to meet her, then hand on Fanchea's shoulder, the old she realized that the times were lord strode about, laughing grimly good and that the lines were falling to himself. to her in pleasant places. All her regrets vanished like ghosts at fading dream.

THE CATHOLIC RECORD

"That was said long ago," she said : " but it is like a sorry old jest ness and unconventionality which covered a generous heart. The old to hear it now lord recognized daily the delicacy and refinement of her nature, some-Angels may get worn Why ? faces for a time, perhaps through wearying after the good in some human soul. When that soul is won thing of which he had discerned at the first moment under the shabby cloak of the little grey woman just arrived at the end of her journey. their wrinkles probably disappear. Whatever is intrinsically good and And there never was any oppressive formality between them. Mamzello beautiful remains a perpetual fact, formality between them. was too much the child of genius and never can be destroyed; it is only what is ugly, wrong, disc not to feel that in her own personant, that is failure and negation. What is time ? Ach ? Ach-! Music ality she carried the key of entrance into any circle above or below her and though said key might be rather rusty for want of use, still will never cease. Hereupon a burst of delicious melody swept through the quiet and darkening room; and n iselessly the possession of it enabled her to feel at home in the atmosphere of Lord Wilderspin's drawing-room. When she had time to look the signora wept.

'Juliet was born in your Verona, When she had time to look around, she discovered that nothcontinued the old professor, laying down his bow; "and Juliet is a fact, though she never was clothed in flesh and blood. The deep red ing could suit her better than this rose that comes every June is a fact, though each time it sheds its ments, the choice contents of the picture-gallery, the musical atmosleaves we can scarcely believe it ever was, or ever will return. Beethoven's Dead March is a reality that still beguiles us lovingly to the she was to assist in the tuition of that still beguiles us lovingly to the grave, while the sad, solemn, mys-terious eyes that look down on us terious from the wall are closed for "We are like a pair of wicked the child; all these conditions of "My dear," she said to Fan, "I shall die of all this delightfulness if I do not escape from it." written a score across it. Let me talk my own way. I do not often get a listener like you." "It is pleasant to me to listen," Seriously," said Herr Harfen-spieler, "do you mean to give up This was said with so agonized a

"Oh, you are not going to leave "No, my love, never. But have got leave from his lordship to fit up one of the empty rooms in my own way. There are the things I brought with me, you know; and come out into the splendour when When the height is missed, the depth is found ; true, but when the feel myself able to bear it Her new life was inaugurated on abyss is touched, there is the rebound which sends us higher than the first evening when Herr Harfen

we otherwise could have reached. Hist! I will tell you a secret. I have made no name like him," pointing to the portrait of Beethospieler came, and all the actors in the little drama was beginning met "My efforts have passed into ven. the works of others; my soul has been only uttered by others' lips. been only uttered by others' lips. I shall die unknown, and be buried She prepared for the occasion with some solemnity, and appeared attired in a very antique brocade obscurely; but I would rather wield this in a garret"—touching his bow -""than have it changed into the sceptre of a prince. Yet I am not mad in the Italian city of her youth and dreams. Under this her loose gold "I have shared your feeling too much to doubt you," said the sig-nora. "My youth was one long passion of longing to create the beautiful. Life broke my tools and and silver hair shimmered strange v, and made one at a distance ask she were child, angel, or witch. Her worn face, with its deep lines of pain and passion, its frequent laughed at my folly ; and yet there is something dwelling with me for all that which binds up the sorest wounds of a broken spirit. Art has wistful, almost infantile expressions, and its wandering lights genius, was very striking to Herr Harfenspieler, who at once recog-nized a good ally and a kindred allowed me to live in her house, though her dearest tasks have been given elsewhere. I have tried to remember that 'they also serve who only stand and wait.' The long patience, the readiness to do if spirit. As they clasped hands they seemed to know that they were brother and sister in what the world would call misfortune, each having found life a loneliness, and the meekness forced upon called, one at being always passed overthese must shelter one from the charge of waste. The joy at seeing given up all that is comfortable and pleasant for a solitary and neverothers do, takes the place of fever-ish desires for self. One grows content to glean where others bear The man who had found happithe sheaves; if only the harvest be somehow gathered in."

"My own thought," said Herr Harfenspieler, "expressed in wom-anly words. Let us put it into music !" under his shaggy brows. He had Again he touched the violin, and wonderful strains poured from it : feverish, hurried, impassioned, then

'You sum up her qualities exactly

I know. To you be the honor of yearning and wistful, and at last dying away in notes whispering of to himself. "With this trio," he said; "on "Now," he said, when he had this triangle, I will make such finished, "we are going to do some-and with several glances all round from under his white brows, as if he feared eyes in the curtains, or After every one was asleep in the ears in the pictures on the walls, drew a folded newspaper from his pocket and tapped it with his finger. I have something to show you ," he said. "Read this adverhere," he said. "Read this adver-tisement. Well, is that intended for us?

It was Kevin's advertisement which had been so carefully worded cordby Mr. Honeywood. Herr Harfen-speiler read it, and a flame shot out of his eyes. "Mein Gott!" he murmured.

"Mein Gott!" he murmured. "Shall we be forced to give up this fair enterprize?" "Hush!" said his lordship, with a girmace. "Don't let us talk about it here, or the words will float up through all the ceilings to that pair of little hare's ears, and we shall have her performing La Sonnambula before her time. She would be down upon us in her bare feet in a trice, imploring to be packed up in this newspaper on the sun, and reflected that Lord Wilderspot, and sent off by post to adver-tiser. The night is fine ; let us take was on its way to the post.

yonder from the wall are closed for ever. So, why should not the face of an angel with a lute remain an angel's face, even though Time has by the dustide. "We are like a pair of wicked old conspirators plotting away somebody's life," said Lord Wilder-spin, striding along between the get a listener like you." "It is pleasant to me to listen," said the signora. "Life does not seem so wasted when one gets rid of the idea of success and failure." "I do not," said his lordship, stopping short. "There, the sky has not fallen upon me !" "And yet—it seems cruel to take no notice of such an advertise-ment." "Now listen to me. Herr.

"Now listen to me, Herr. You are a musician, and all you musicians, poets, artists, and your kin, are bound to be sentimentalists according to both Nature and Art; but I am none of your race. I may he a centleman, and therein lies the bond between us, but I am nature a marauder, a revolutionist, a turner-upside-down of things in general, a whim-indulger, a fancymonger ; and as arbitray as a threetailed bashaw. All this you know as well as I. Now I am not doing a bad act in bringing up this little peasant-born genius to her true vocation, but hang me if I am going to have a troop of Irish bog-trotters running after us all the time the thing is going on. If these low connections of hers were blood rela-tions—were her own family—I don't know how I should get out of the matter. It this Kevin were her brother, or father, or if she were old enough to have a lover and he were that worthy, I suppose I should feel bound to 'interview' the fellow ; but as she is nothing to him or his I shall beg leave to remain in my modest obscurity. Let him dig his potatoes, and cut his turf, and leave the child to the good fortune that has dropped upon her.' "You do not mean to ignore this altogether ?" persisted Herr Harfenspieler. Confound it, no; I suppose I must do something." "Write, and tell them as much as you please; and make terms for keeping her unmolested." "My friend, you do not know these Irish! They have hearts as big as copper kettles, and value money no more than sand where their affections are concerned. You know the creature that sang for us an hour ago and is now curled up in her pillows with her blue eyes shut as fast as yonder convolvoli. Could you have looked

she went to her

him rejoice at the decision of his conceal under a matter-of-fact exterior. As we passed on down the road Hall that night, the Harfenspieler sat at his open window fingering his the boy walked rather unsteadily. "You are tired," I said. "Let me help you along." I took him by violin tenderly and fitfully. The jasmine from without scented the air, and the old musician was living the arm, and we soon arrived at my diggings. He was silent until I had white jasmine wreaths had per-fumed other chambers. made him remove his overcoat and led him into the cheerful sitting-fumed other chambers. "'Is it right, after all," he thought, "to play such tricks upon human hearts? Has not humble and holy love too often to pay the penalty for fame and the triumphs Can we who rob this lowly of art? nest say that the bird would not be happier singing in her native almost spent.

But this mood of the old professor passed away with a few hours of moonlight dreams, and a restless I feel rather afraid to take wine or night. The impulse of his genius was too strong for the more subtle tenderness of his heart. He was glad when he saw his young pupil reluctance

TO BE CONTINUED

TAKING RISKS

By Joseph Carmichael in Rosary Magazine

I have long been accustomed to take the tram-car from my business place in the big midland town to one of its suburbs; there is a railway station near enough to both ends of the journey, but the tram is more interesting as well as more free from flurry and rush. More-over, it brings one into contact with different class of travellers, and I find it attractive to weave about their varying romances personalities.

On one specially dreary eveningrainy, foggy, and chilly—I was particularly glad to board the brightly-lighted car, after the depressing gloom of the street; grateful, too, that I should have self but a few yards to traverse between street corner and home when alighting.

Though the car was fairly well filled there were no very striking occupants-just ordinary workinghis business into a syndicate and folk. But as I sank down into a settle down as a country gentleman. Young Tom was an important vacant corner seat, a slim youth entered and took the opposite place factor in the scheme : he was not -a really handsome lad! I was attracted at once by the quite expected to demean himself by the slightest connection with the "Works," but was to play the classical beauty of his pale face ; the dark blue eyes and black hair suggested Irish blood. But how gentleman, and by means aristocratic acquaintances float the miserably sad, how hopelessly wretched, he looked! He closed his Wollencrofts into " society." eyes and leaned his head in the corner with an air of weariness his son was unrestrained. He had literally turned him loose on the that touched while it interested me. world-penniless, indeed, but for the lad's mother, who had secretly I took stock of the youth. About eighteen, evidently; raiment, origin-ally of best quality, much worn; boots and trousers—dark-blue serge, supplied him with all the available cash in her possession, as she took a like the coat which showed under tearful leave of the exile. Tom had gone straight to London, the grey mackintosh — terribly splashed with street mud. The pecting in his youthful ardor to get congenial employment; but without hands resting on his knees were refined and well kept. Everything references, or experience, nothing could be gained, and his money was about him spoke of gentle birth. Something had gone wrong! There rapidly diminishing, his shoes and clothing wearing out, and the out-was no trace of dissipation in the attractive face; but there was look depressing in the extreme. He had come down to the country misery - perhaps want, even -suggested in its expression of hopefor economy's sake, attracted to Midhampton by the fact of the less langour. My heart went out residence there of a youth with in pity.

whom he had formed a rather close The conductor's appeal for fares friendship at Oxford ; but his friend was touring on the Continent and broke upon my musings. I paid mine; the boy opposite did the same, his face flushing slightly as same, his face flushing slightly as he did so. My neighbor, a small the rest of the family were girl of about nine, burst into tears. She had lost her money and could shown the merely polite interest in room, where a bright fire glowed and the shaded lamp showed a table SUFFERERS BUCKLEY'S 2-Bottle Treatment spread for dinner. My guest looked so white and Over 10,000 Canadians Freed from Misery of These Diseases. yeary as he sank into the chair I You, too, can get relief from your sufferings. ad drawn forward for him that felt alarmed. I proposed a glass of wine, or mouthful of brandy, Send 10c. to cover packing and postage for trial package. W. K. BUCKLEY LTD., Mfg. Chemists Dept. 2 , 142 Mutual Street, Terente. realizing that his strength was You are most kind," he said, BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS I feel rather afraid to take wine or spirits, under the circumstances. MURPHY & GUNN "You shall have some soup first," I said. I ordered in the dinner at BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, NOTARIES Solicitors for The Home Bank of Canada once, and got the lad to sit down Solicitors for the Roman Catholic with me without pretense of Episcopal Corporation We talked little during the meal, Suite 53. Bank of Toronto Chambe for my visitor was evidently in sore need of nourishment, and I felt it FOY, KNOX & MONAHAN wiser to attend, in the first place, to BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, NOTARIES, Etc. bodily rather than mental affairs. Over coffee and cigarettes the boy told his story. It was the not unusual one in this benighted land —thanks to solid British prejudice, A. E. Knox E. L Middleton Cable Address : "Foy" Telephones { Main 461 Main 462 and want of logic! His father. Thomas Wollencroft, a successful ironmaster, had sent him—his only son—to Oxford, so that he might be TORONTO the means of the social advancement of the family. Young Tom had been "fool enough" in his father's phraseology—"to get ensnared by those Papists" (T. W. Senior got a bad attack of virulent BARRISTERS adjectivitis whenever he alluded to the subject, to "join on with them in their tom-fooleries"—in ordinary English, to become a Catholic him-

EDUCATIONAL

St. Jerome's College Founded 1864 KITCHENER, ONT

ellent Business College Department, ellent High School or Academic Depart Excellent College and Philosophica transf. Address REV. W. A. BENINGER, C. R., Presider

FUNERAL DIRECTORS John Ferguson & Sons

180 KING ST.

Offices : Continental Life Buildi CORNER BAY AND RICHMOND STR ETS DAY, FERGUSON & CO. James E. Day John M. Ferguson Joseph P. Waish TORONTO, CANADA LUNNEY & LANNAN BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, NOTARIES Harry W. Lunney, B.A., B.C.L., Alphonsus Lannan, LL. B. CALGARY, ALBERTA T. W. Senior's religion consisted in being officially churchwarden and JOHN H. MCELDERRY personally a rare attendant at his BARRISTER. SOLICITOR parish church, and a munificent contributor to all Church charities NOTARY PUBLIC which issued regular lists of sub-CONVEYANCER scriptions. His aim was to make enough money to live in easy affluence, until he saw fit to convert y to Loan Telepho HERALD BLDG. ROOM 24 GUELPH, ONT. ARCHITECTS WATT & BLACKWELL Members Ontario Assoc ARCHITECTS Sixth Floor, Bank of Toronto Chamber his LONDON ONT. DENTISTS The old ironmaster's anger with DR. BRUCE E. EAID Room 5, Dominion Bank Chambers Richmond and Dundas Sts. Phone 5666

HAY FEVER and CATARRH LONDON, CANADA Phone: 170

E

APRIL 29, 192.

FRE

ASTHMA

CHRONIC BRONCHITIS

T. Louis Monahan George Keogh

cock-crow when she felt Fanchea's warm arms clasped round her neck. She allowed herself to be whirled from one beautiful room to another between gusts of joyous informa-tion which the child let loose upon her respecting the delights of the Various huggings took place. place at the beginnings and ends of the corridors, and Lord Wilderspin, coming suddenly round a corner, was witness of one of these.

"It will work, I see," he said to himself. "The child will have mothering as well." Then aloud : "Aha, madam, I have caught you already spoiling my property ! M nightingale is not here in a gilded cage that she may sing to me and you alone, remember. This lively bit of human intelligence," putting his broad hand on Fan's cool, rounded brow, "is not here to play but to work.

The signora was a little startled by his fierce manner, but when she saw the arch smile with which Fanchea met his glaring eyes, she caught the cue to his character at

"My lord," she said, in her rnest, emotional way, "this arnest, emotional way, "this dream of yours was mine first. I had only the will; you have the power.

Thank heaven, then, madam, that we have come together," said his lordship. "Between will and shall, to use a vulgar power, we proverb, either 'make a spoon, or spoil a horn.' But mind, I warn you; the making will be mine, the spoiling yours. I never do anything spoiling yours. I never do an wrong; so don't imagine it. And with a scowl and a low bow he left them

This first greeting of the old lord's to the signora was a fit introduction to the intercourse that was to exist between them. His quizzical temper and her intensity clashed together strangely sometimes, but did not exactly jar, for he had feeling enough to appreciate master.' a nature which he nevertheless Twang sufficient humor to relish the rough-music as all Europe shall run to thing, you and I, something that hear

And as these eager guardians hovered about the slender slip of humanity, with her black head and rich material to work upon. There is a quality in the voice which I have never known equalled. In it ribbons, her deep-shaded crimson eyes and pomegranate cheeks, castis contained something that once heard never can be forgotten. She ing their spells, of woven paces and will give expression and form to the noblest conceptions of the great of waving hands, around her, Kevin himself, had been able to see, might masters. Not only are her notes ravishing, but she has a broad intelhave surely been content with her state. She herself felt a deep ligence, a rich imagination, and fortunately also the pure, vigorous physique which will make her perfect mistress of her artistic onder at finding that she was the object of so much attention from such learned and travelled people, and listened with interest to their conversation. "Madam," said Herr Harfen-spieler, " allow me as a musician to pay a tribute in the name of my as I have done myself," said the signora. country to the musical genius of your beautiful land."

the first discovery. More yet can you do, more than educating and "Ah, sir," said the signora, "we may well feel a mutual sympathy.

powers.

Your country contains the intellect of music, and mine, perhaps, the soul." "And mine deserves some praise for producing that noble strain. "The roast beef of old England."" broke in Lord Wildersnin. amuse her with no trashy novels and romances; let her know nothing broke in Lord Wilderspin. me remind you that dinner has been but of the higher purer literature ; cultivate her heart to thrill only to announced.

After dinner the old lord had a the real, the most genuine, and unaffected sorrows of life, to the smoke and forty winks in his smok-ing-room, while the musician, who purest and holiest affections. People call me an enthusiast, but I could not bear tobacco, drank coffee and tuned his violin, and talked with know to whom I am talking at this the signora in the music-room. moment At this point Fan came in, fresh

" I was born in Verona," said the signora, in answer to a question. "And I in Nuremberg," said Herr Harfenspieler, touching his most delicate string with a loving finger. "I know your Verona. What a dream! That is why your face reminds me of the angels in Fra and glowing, out of the evening dews of the garden, bringing a nosegay for her master's buttonhole, and a rose for the signora's bosom reminds me of the angels in Fra Angelico's pictures," he added, bluntly. "I am no flatterer, and fingers fixed the bit of bloom close bluntly. to his shirt-frills; and, with a glow still in his dark, deep-set eyes, he touched the first note of "With Verdure Clad." you may not be heavenly for aught know ; but I have seen you blowing a trumpet in one of the Paradisaical visions of the angelic a nature which he nevertheless delighted to startle, and she had the violin ; and a silent sob echoed it in the signora's heart.

and offered her a bright sovereign forget her night-prayer for evin? You could not do it. And shall be proved worth the doing. Kevin ? This girl who stands between us is they are all 'tarred with the same to use a vulgar proverb stick. your musical ears have which probably never heard before. dren every one of them in faith and love-all honor to them for it' and the lord lifted his hat from his bald head—"but still I am not going to have them spoiling my plans with their cushla machrees and their ululus !"

Herr Harfenspieler had nothing more to say. He felt it best to let the whimsical nobleman work out his own idea, and put it into words

"You do not ask me what I am going to do?"

I am waiting to hear."

"I think of answering the adver-tisement with another in which I shall give enough information to allay anxiety on the girl's account. I shall also hold out a hope of future meeting, but give the people to understand that there is to be no communication with her at present. That is the best plan I can hit upon.

And how will you satisfy the child herself as time goes on ?

lad.

"By impressing upon her that in following my plans obediently she will benefit her friends in the end. She is fully convinced that I am constantly making inquiries about them, and she will go on expecting every day to see them walking in, the till gradually the vivid desire for thoughts. them fades away. I have no doubt that as soon as she is in any degree independent and begins to make money (as one day she must) she will actively seek them herself and "This is the prelude to our song, said the Harfenspieler with one of want to pour everything into their laps. However, when that day comes, we must see about protecting her.

Herr Harfenspieler was silent.

touched the first note of "With Verdure Clad." Later, when the signora and her charge had retired for the night, Lord Wilderspin, with a peculiar look, half comic and half dismayed, required. They had not even offered him tea, which would have "Off you get, then !" was the conductor's stern decree. "See, I'll pay for you!" I helped him on his way; for a meagre breakfast was all that his consoled her.

An extra penny for sweets An extra penny for sweets brought smiles in place of tears, and she shyly thanked me. The lad opposite looked on almost wistfully, I thought; but catching my eyes, closed his own once more. Jumping out at my usual corner, advice and help." I must own I was deeply moved by the lad's evidently helpless situation. There could be no mis-I found my opposite neighbor alighting too. Stupid British reticement checked my inclination to ask if I could be of service in to ask if I could be of service in any way. He might resent my interference! So I started off towards home. But my conscience reproached me. What harm would have been done by a kindly word? Supposing he had haughtily rejected my advance—it could but have given me a salutary mortification! But he was not haughty mortification! trusting his sincerity; his manners were those of a cultured gentleman. and his personality unusually winning. My sympathies were entirely in his favor, and I resolved to help him, come what might. () have a spinster sister, herself the soul of charity, who loves to ward off suspicions from herself by deal-But he was not haughty; merely a boy in trouble, whom a kind word might have cheered and heartened. ing out to me generous reprimands upon my foolish accessibility to any casual tramp who can spin a pathetic yarn. Luckily she hap-pened to be absent that evening.) I felt very angry with myself for submitting to conventionalism rather than the urging of charity. I hesitated, stopped, turned back

The boy was moved almost tears when I outlined my plan. -moved by some forlorn hope of recovering a lost opportunity. could not put him up that night, but I directed him to a decent hotel, Perhaps I might even now find the and proffered coin for immediate Footsteps were approachingrather faltering footsteps—from necessities. the direction of the corner of the evening to He was to come next evening to dinner, and we would discuss possibilities. I hinted (as road where the car had set me down. I moved along slowly towards the wayfarer. By the light of a street lamp I recognized likely to disarm my sister's suspicions) that he might prudently invest in some suitable raiment, and handed my card as introduction to lad who was occupying my the tailor I usually employed, promising the lad that I would

tnat

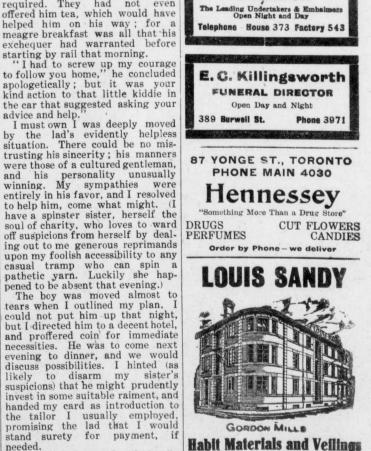

starting by rail that morning.

to follow you home,'

I threw convention to the winds. "I fancy you are in need of help," I said coldly. "If so, I am needed.

at your service." In that dim light, even I could see the flash of relief in his face. "You are more than kind," he reid his mice was musical and its was clear when I accompanied my new friend to the hotel I had mentioned. He gave me a tremendous grip when we parted, and I walked back home elated at the said-his voice was musical, and its accent cultured. "I am, indeed, in great straits just now !"

thought of having played so success-fully the role of the Good

.

SPECIALLY PRODUCED FOR THE USE OF

RELIGIOUS COMMUNITIES BLACK, WHITE, AND COLOURED SERGES and CLOTHS, VEILINGS

CASHMERES, ETC.

ked in a large variety of widths and qualities Samples forwarded on applicatio

LOUIS SANDY Mille. STAFFORD, ENGLAND -Louisandi, Stafford. 'Phone No. 104