WHAT OF THE FUTURE?

Let Us Ring Down the Curtain on Political Jobbery and Corruption—Pres. Coaker Paves the Way for a Brighter, Better and More Prosperous Newfoundland.

(Editor Mail and Advocate) Sir, We are told that when this great carnage ends—with victory for our gallant armies—a new era of things will be ushered in. One of the permanent effects which this war is likely to exert is a general awakening. The world, or at least the British portion of it, will be purged of its former complacent self-satisfied style of existence. A new condition of things will be created, new problems will have to be faced, and new methods will have to be adopted in the solving of them. First, and par-amount above all others, will be the consolidation and closer unification of the Empire. Speaking from a military and defensive point of view, this has already been accomplished, it is an automatic result of the war, but the mutual protective side must inevitably follow as an indispensable factor in its future preservation and progress. Thoughtful men to-day are already adjusting the necessary machinery for its summation, even while the guns that woke them up to its necessity are still booming.

Unity is strength! Never in the annals of time has the truth of those words been so clearly demonstrated as in the hour of Britain's peril, and that is why we look forward in hopeful anticipation to its application and practice in the fulfilment of our future civil destinies. But if this much desired, condition of things are to take birth as a result, and as some degree of recompense for the sacrifices and agonies of to-day, then, the constituent portions of this Empire, both separately and collectively, must prepare for a rejuvenating propaganda whose diplomacy must apply to the masses.

Not mere politicians will accomplish this, but Statesmen. Then what of Newfoundland. Can we hope for a more universal co-operating spirit in the future, and less grab all you can, that we suffer from to-day.

antly agreed that Mr. Coaker had done a lot of good. And so I find the most biased political shellback, when cornered, will admit that Coaker has done a great work for the fishermen, but he does not seem to realize that it is then his bounden duty as a Newfoundland to materially and morally assist the man who have done this good. Protection and prosperity for the fishermen and laborer of the Colony surely means increased trade in every other line, and the tradesmen and laborer of this town who allows a few political leeches to blind his eyes to the real issues is one whose common sense is not to be envied.

What are the people of the North doing, the men who have made the Union and participated in its benefits for the last seven years? Are they not pledging their unwavering confidence in its future, by the erection of the greatest commercial and industrial plant in the Island. These people are taking care of the future, which, under God, they have at last an opportunity to share in the moulding and developing of. No doubt when the historian's pen records the history of Newfoundland in the first quarter of the 20th century, the name of W. F. Coaker will stand pre-eminent. People then will realize and appreciate the man and his work, and nothing but kind words and praise will be heard. But it was ever thus.

Yes, Mr. Editor, when the smoke of battle passes, men's minds will be chastened and the sentiment of Unity and comradeship will be established as never before. Then may we hope for the foundation of real democracy and the ringing down of the curtains for all time on political jobbery and corruption in the much-abused land.

Germany's Cotton Reserves Exhausted

LONDON, Aug. 7.—(New York Sun cable)—The Lausanne Gazette makes the statement that Germany's cotton reserves are completely exhausted.

The newspaper asserts the source of its information is German, and absolutely reliable.

There may be no such word as fail, still it's a dead waste of time to look for compressed air in a busted tire.

Christian Names Of The Early Puritans

EXPRESSED THEIR EAGER FAITH. Humor and Pathos Mingled; Plerin Character Revealed, and Hopes and Fears were Suggested.

Many quaint fancies have ruled the choice of a name for the individual among different nations and in various parts of the world, and nearly always there has been some attempt to convey a thought in the name—to make it appropriate. Even our common surnames to-day have been developed from some word or combination of words that usually gave a clue to the character or occupation of the individual who first bore it.

The Moslem and the North American Indian are fond of sweet poetry in this direction; but if occasion seemed to require they could find names Plutonian enough. It remained for the English Puritans, however, to cap the climax in the way of fanciful personal nomenclature.

All the ardor of their irrepresible religion they revealed in the names which they assumed and which they gave to their children. And faint traces of the customs have come down even to our day. Hate-Evil, Go-Good-Always, and Walk-Meekly were the children, a generation ago, of a family descended from the Puritans.

There is a touch of pathos in the name Dream-Sweetly-God's-Lamb, which a Puritan mother gave to her infant daughter; and there is almost a grim humor in the name which one of Cromwell's veterans assumed late in life—Praise-God-Barebones.

In an old work on "English Surnames and Patronymics" are found the following names taken from a 'sry list in 1658—the year in which Richard Cromwell succeeded his father as Protector: 'Faint-Not Hewitt, Accepted-Trevor, Redeemed-Compton, Make-Peace-Heaton, God-Reward Smart, Stand-Fast-on-High Stinger, Earth Arams, Called Lower, Meek Brewer, Bo-Courteous Cole, Repentance Avis, Search-the-Scriptures Moreton, Kill-Sin Pimple, Return Spelman, Be-Faithful Joiner, Fly-De-bats Roberts, Fight-the-Good-Fight of Faith White, More-Fruit Flower, Hope-For Bending, Gracful Harding, Weep-Not Billing, Seek-Wisdom Wood, Elected Mitchell, The-Peace-of-God Knight."
