e is, and if correct, to permit her to continue he hough full of slaves; but if she have no right to ican flag, to seize her, and liberate slaves. fest that if a simple exhibition of the stars and armiest that if a simple exhibition of the stars and armed utional ship, the entire ocean might, at once, be given a to-pirates, acondition which certainly will not, cannot a complied with. We do not apprehend that war will rese from so insignificant a squabble, but that to end the dispa, the Americans will themselves despatch a police squadronso the West Indies, in order to relieve foreigners from the upleasant duty of inspecting the papers of American vessle. It may b questioned, however, if it be worth England's while to incrupt the slave trade, which she is unable to suppress, at a great annual cost of money, and of still more valuable lives. It appears to us that if the slave trade were free, fewer deaths would not only occur on the middle pas-Angels, but dat the more agroed that are imported into trepited and engi-tropical America, jost so much the soones will diverge care licell, by deligring those countries permanently into the possession of the black race of mees, a detily whice, soom to again them as no very distant data.
