THE POET PHILOSOPHER

I used to work for Mr. Knox, farmer who had lots of rocks. I left my couch at break of day and toiled until the dusk was gray. And when the evening meal was o'er I had to do chore after chore; ENCOURAGEMENT I had to feed a million sows, and milk about a million cows. And never once did Mr. Knox remark to me: 'Well done, old Sox!" He never cheered my dismal days by handing out a word of praise. What wonder, then, that in my ire, I set his house and barn on fire, and swiped a wagon-load of straw, and carried off his mother'law? I went to work for Mr. Deans, and plowed his corn and hoed his beans, and so when I came in from my toil, all plastered o'er with sweat and soil, he called me a looloo, peach and bird. And so my labor was delight, and though fagged out and worn at night, I trotted blithely out of doors and gaily did a million chores. If all employers only knew how much a word of praise will do, the sullen workmen that we see would do their little stunts with glee.
