While the stranding of the ship is infortunate, there is another feature still more regrettable attached to the stranding of the Arranmore. The steamer sailed from Prince Edward Island recently with a very heavy cargo of supplies for lighthouses and Marconi stations on the shores of the Straits of Belle Isle. If these supplies do not reach their destination there is a possibility that the people there will starve. It had been originally planned that the ice breaker Montcalm would make this trip, but she was diverted to the St. Lawrence to keep the track clear for outgoing ships. It may be too late even for the Montcalm to take a new or
