Ten minutes elapsed before they came out. Miss Bettins figeted and grumbled, but it did not bring them; and when they did come, the doctor had a strange cloud upon his brow. Edward also, or else Sara fancied it; but he grew merry as the dinner advanced, joking and laughing with every one.

She took the opportunity of speaking to him after dinner. He went out on the lawn at the back, to smoke his cigar in the starlight, and Sara stole after him. He threw his arm around her, and they paced the gravel walk.

"Were went talking pages before dinner that

'The regiment's ordered abroad."

"The regiment's ordered abroad."

"Oh, Edward!"
For a few minutes neither spoke again. Sara's greatest thought was for her father. Sh: seemed to divine how cruelly Dr. Davenal felt the separation from his sons; Richard dead, Edward in London with his regiment. If he had to go abroad to remote countries, thousands of miles away—why, almost as good that he had died. They should feelit as.

"And that explains why I could not get a long ieave," he resumed. "There's so much of preparation to be made; and we officers have to look to everything, for the men as well as for ourselves."

"Have you told papa this?" breathed Sara. "I have told him, but not quite the worst yet. I did not say how soon we expect to sail," "And when do you sail?" asked Sara. "And when do you sail?" asked Sara.

"And when do you sail?" asked Sara,
breathlessly,
"In a week or two."
They paced on in silence. Captain Davenal suddenly looked down at her and detected tears.

at home, Edward. It was just after Richard's death, I remember. Can you not do that now?"

"No, I cannot. I can neither sell out nor exchange. It is impossible."

There was so much grave meaning in his tone, that Sara looked up involuntary. He laughed at her earnest face.

"Oh, Eiward imust you go?"

"There's no help for it."

"Where do you go!"

"Malta, first. India—as we suppose—afterwards."

"No, no! I trust not."

"It will be as though he had no children!" she exclaimed, almost passionately, in her love for her father, in her grief. "Richard dead; you gone; he will have no one left."

"He will have you, Sara."

"I! Who am I!"

"The best of us. go have given him no grief in all your life; land poor Duck have; plenty. It is best as it is, Sara."

"Don't say so. It cannot be for the best. When do you really go?" she continued, a faint, sad fear upon her that it was sooner than he confessed. "Iell me the real truth."

"I have told you the real truth, Sara, as faint, sad fear upon her that it was sooner than he confessed. "Iell me the real truth, "I have told you the real truth, Sara, as faint, sad fear upon her that it was sooner than he confessed. "Iell me the real truth, I have told you the real truth, Sara, as faint, sad fear upon her that it was sooner than he confessed. leave?"

"Of course I shall."

She could scarcely speak for the sobs that were rising. She strove bravely to beat them down, for Sara Davenals was an undemonstrative nature, and could not bear that its signs of emotion should be betrayed outwardly. She loved her brother greatly; even the more, as the doctor did, for the loss of Richard; and this going sbroad for an indefinite period, perhaps forever, rang in her ears as the very knell of hope. He might never return; he might go away, as Richard had, only to die.

How long they continued to pace that walk underneath the privet-hedge, which skirted and hid the narrow side-path leading to the stables, Sara scarcely knew. Captain Davenal spoke little, he seemed buried in thought; Sara could not speak at all, her heart was full. Rarely had the night's brilliant stars locked down on a sadness deeper felt than was that of Sara Davenal.

CHAPTER VIII.

A TREAT FOR NEAL.

Nearly 24 hours subsequent to that, Dr. Davenal was paging the same walk side by side with Lady Oswald. The wedding was over, the guests were gone, and the house, after the state breakfast, had resumed its tranquility. Of the guests, Lady Oswald had alone remained, with the exception of Mr. Oswald Cray. It was one of those elaborate breakfast-dinners which take hours to eat, and 5 o'clock had struck ere the last carriage drove from the door.

Lady Oswald asked for some tea; Miss Davenal, as great a lover of tea as herself, partock of it with her. Captain Davenal preferred a cigar, and went into the garden to smoke it; Mr. Oswald Cray accompanied him, but he never smoked. But of them were to return to London by the 7 o'clock train.

Pensive and Expensive.

Many a woman shrinks from consulting a physician about functional derangements and weakness, and prefers to suffer in silence. She is sad and pensive, and her neglect of her ailments will prove expensive. It may cost her her life. One of the most skillful physicians of the days who has had a vast experience in curing diseases peculiar to women, has prepared a remedy which is of inestimable aid to them. We refer to Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, the only remedy for woman's Prescription, the only remedy for woman's peculiar weaknesses and ailments, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfacturers. the manufacturers, that it will give satis faction in every case, or money refunded.

A Wonderful Cure.—Mr. David Smith, Coe Hill, Ont, writes: "For the benefit of others I wish to say a few words about Northrop & Lyman's Vroge-Table Discovery. About a year ago I took a very severe cough, had a virulent sore on my lips, was bad with dyspepsia, constipation and general debility. I tried almost every conceivable remedy, outwardly and inwardly, to cure the sore but all to no purpose. I had often thought of trying Northrop & Lymans Vrogetable Discovery, so I got a bottle and when I had used about one half the sore showed evident signs of healing. By the time that bottle was done it had about disappeared and my general health was improving fast. I was always of a very bilicus habit and had used quinine and lemon juice with very little affect. But since using three bottles of the Vrogetable Discovery the biliousness is entirely gone and my general health is excellent. I am 60 years old. Parties using it should continue it for some time after they think they are cured. It is by far the best health restorer I know." 3
