GARDEN COMPETITION.

To the Editor of The Advertiser: The publishing of the names of all contestants in the garden competition has aroused a keen interest among those competing, and, at the same time has caused keen disappointment among the working class who have entered, as among the names on the list will owning beautiful homes, and who have plenty of time and money for the adornment of them. It is not my intention to take up much of your valuables pace, but I think and believe the judges will concur with my opinion, that it was not the intention of our good mayor to encourage these latter people, but rather that the prizes should be awarded to the people who have to work for their living, and thus give them some encouragement. If the homes of working class were as beautiful as those of the rich it would have been unnecessary to have offered the prize

Change of water, cooking and green fruit is sure to bring on the attacks. To such persons we would recommend Dr. J. D. DOMESTIC SCIENCE WILL BE A VERY PRACTICAL SUBJECT

Method by Which It Will Be subject at the midsummer examina-Added to the Curriculum of the Public Schools.

Domestic science has been talked about so much of late, and especially in London, since the school board have schools, that it is advisable to understand thoroughly what domestic science as taught in the Collegiate Institute will mean.

First, the school board wish it distinctly understood that the domestic science course will not, as so many people erroneously believe, be simply and solely for Collegiate Institute pu-pils, but also for the pupils of the senior classes in all the public schools of the city. Only one room will be equipped at present, and that room will be in the Collegiate Institute, but Inspector Carson will so arrange the timetable in much good. the public schools that the pupils will be enabled to attend the classes in the Collegiate. Many pupils have wondered whether the course was to be optional or compulsory, or whether there would be exwork of the school, and would be included in the general fee paid by Collegiate pupils. The school board wish it emphasized that the course is enfuture housewives, and it is to be tirely optional, and that there will be no fees for either Collegiate or public opportunity which the enterprise of the school pupils.

this course will be allowed to drop the subject of physiology, and will not be to become the rarest of treasures—a required to take any standing in that perfect houskeeper.

The main thing taught in domestic science is, of course, cooking, but incidentally everything pertaining to the management of the home is general brought in.

Necessarily the work in the Colle-giate will be, to some extent, theoretical, because with the multiplicity of other studies at the school too much cannot be attempted at first, but as decided to have it taught in the city far as possible the work will be eminently practical.

The girls will be taught everything about the house on the most hygienic principles possible. Personal cleanliness will be insisted upon, to the spotlessness of cuffs and apron, and everything about the kitchen will be as shining as soap and water can make it. The girls will be taught to clean the stove, scrub the floor, wash the woodwork, and wash out their own disheloths. Every branch of household work will be taken up, even to setting and clearing a table, and lighting a fire. The cooking will not be expensive or ex-travagant at all. It will be plain, but dainty, a combination productive of The girls will be taught to be as economical as possible in household work, not wasting a scrap which can in any way be utilized. Talks on foods and marketing will be given and illustrated by practical extra fees for the lessons, or whether amples, and on occasions when roasts they would be part of the general or fowls are shown practical carving will be taught.

There is no doubt that this course hoped that the girls will respond to the school board has afforded them, for Those in the public school who take not only will it cultivate their powers was without a doubt vigorous effort on the part of Mr. Chamberlain to concentrate attention on this subject as the most available ground for common action, but there has been a complete failure to commit the colonies to a costly policy for the military and naval defense of the empire.

This question, apart from the increase of the Australian naval contributions, remains where it was, and steamship subsidies have not been taken out of the hands of the colonial ministers interested in working out plans for a fast mail service on the Atlantic and Pacific.

Preferential trade is virtually remanded to the serious consideration of the British and colonial governments and taxpayers. It has been recommended cautiously and tentatively within the bounds of the existing tariff arrangements.

Mitchell stated today that he had received official information from Pittsburg that the strike of coal miners along the West Penn Railroad was about settled and that the men would be back to work in a short time. This he said, would enable the miners' union to concentrate all its strength in the anthracite region and the West Virginia strike region. Mitchell said he was confident that the hard coal miners were going to win.

hold out with the hope of destroying the Miners' Union. This makes it per-tinent to inquire what they expect to gain by the disruption of the organiza-tion. The utter folly of expecting by this means to forever extinguish unionism in the anthracite field must be clear to every disinterested observer. Unions have been defeated and disrupted before now, but that has not kept the workers in that particular line of industry from organizing. It has simply postponed, but not prevented, the ultimate settlement of the wage question upon a reasonable basis. Nor is there any foundation for the claim that the miners in the hard coal field differ so greatly in temperament and reliability from those in other places. The foreign element can be found in every coal mining district. The question really narrows down to the simple issue, stated by Senator Hanna: "Why should not the anthracite operators find it as profitable and satisfactory to recognize the union in their field as New York, Aug. 13 .- Martin Dolphm, it to be in every other state, where the
