Drivers Do Not Need as Much Attention as Owners and the Betting Shed.

One of the things that has not infrequently happened in the Grand Circuit, says a sporting touter, is for the judges to call a driver or perchance all of them to the stand before they start in a race, and tell them what is going to happen to them if they do not try from the start, or in other words, holding them up before the public as a lot of thieves, says an exchange.

The most charitable construction that can be put on such a proceeding is that it takes a thief a catch a thief. In the common courts of the land a man is usually supposed to be innocent If track officials would pay a little a team of Irish athletics to compete closer attention to owners and the men in the Olympic games.
