INVENTS MACHINE TO MAKE VIOLINS

M. H. Solomons of This City Claims He Can Reproduce Any Instrument.

WITH ROTARY CHISEL

Workman Must Have Original From Which To Set Machine.

London music lovers will be interested to know that a Londoner claims to have invented a machine for the perfect reproduction of such famous violins as the Stradivarius. M. H. Solomons, Albert Street, violin maker, has just perfected for practical use this interesting invention.

Solomons, "Whether his violin would to the uniform in different boxes—and then there was real trouble. "Hitherto the violin maker has been the plaything of chance," says Mr. be of beautiful tone or not was a matter of fate. Violin makers had not arrived at any scientific basis, by which to be guided in order to produce their

Mr. Solomons now claims that he has nohieved a machine which will reproduce any type or violin in its original beauty of tone.

It is an acknowledged fact that the tone a violin depends largely on the outof a violin depends largely of the instrument. A very slight change in the shape of the violin makes a marvellous change in its tone. Mr. Solomons' machine will appear to far yielin with reproduce the frame of a violin with exactness, provided that it has an original to work from.

The working part of the machine is a rotary chisel working on a frame, and driven by an electric motor. A hand working with a chisel makes up and down, back and forth, left and right movements, to effect its work. The rotary chisel is stationary, but the frame, in which the wood for the violin frame is placed, is capable of making all of these movements, bringing the wood into contact with the stationary chisel.

Close by is the original yiolin, a Stradivarius for example, according to which the new violin is being made. It, too, is placed in a similar framework capable of making all of the mytions of the first framework. An indicator or pointer works along the curves of the original violin frame, and as it moves, transfers those motions to the second framework, bringing the rotary chisel into contact with the new wood and reproducing an exact counterpart of the

QUEENS COUNSEL

Royal people have the speciality of old family servants. Sometimes whole generations serve their royal master; father, son, grandson daughters, nieces, aunts and granddaughters. A second dynasty of another caste!

The king had for forty years an old servant who scolded him when he was nearly sixty, as he had done when he was a boy at school!

They always quarreled, but they could not get on without each other. But I have never known the king get peacefully to bed or peacefully up; there were daily scoldings and reproaches on each side. Besides, the old man was awfully stingy and there was a stand-up fight each time the master wanted to buy a new suit of clothes with a host of parties and social gath-or a pair of boots!

The old man had an old wife and a very capable daughter. These two did most of the king's packing and daughter. These two did most of the king's packing and daughter are could have worked harder. The quaintest situations have arisen from this sharing of many in the care of one man and I have known excruciatingly funny but desperate moments when the old servant was hunting at the critical last hour before an official arrival for some missing part of the royal attire which could not be found. And quarrel, quarrel, they went all the time!

Yet when his master was ill, this particular family servant lay for six weeks on the floor beside his bed, nor would he hear of getting into a bed himself. This type, alas, is disappearing and much of the picturesqueness and much dear old tradition goes with them, never, I am afraid, to come back.

To End Severe Cough Quickly, Try This For real results, this old home-mad-remedy beats them all. Easily prepared.

You'll never know how quickly a bad cough can be conquered, until you try this famous old home-made remedy. Anyone who has coughed all day and all night, will say that the immediate relief given is almost like magic. It takes but a moment to prepare and really there is nothing better for coughs.

prepare and really there is nothing better for coughs.

Into a 16-oz, bottle, put 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to make 16 ounces. Or you can use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, this mixture saves about two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough preparations, and gives you a more positive, effective remedy. It keeps perfectly, and tastes pleasant—children like it.

You can feel this take hold instantly, soothing and healing the membranes in all the air passages. It promptly loosens a dry, tight cough, and soon you will notice the phlegm thin out, and then disappear altogether. A day's use will usually break up an ordinary throat or chest cold, and it is also splendid for bronchiels, croup, hoarseness, and bronchiels, croup,

UNCLE WIGGILY AND THE QUIET

There had been very cold weather nd some snow in Woodland where Uncle Wiggily lived in his hollow tump bungalow. The ground had rozen, and many small creatures had one to the very deepest part of their varm burrows, there to curl up into small round balls of fur and wait for the coming of spring. Then the white flakes had sifted down from the clouds to make a cosy blanket for the cold earth, for you must know that it is warm under the snow.

This all happened around Christmas ime, and, now that the holiday was ver, the warm sun had melted the now, and even melted the ice from a juiet pool that was not far from Unc Viggily's hollow stump bungalow. In summer Bully and Bawly No Tai he frogs splashed in this pool, and Lulu, Alice and Jimmle Wibble-wobble the ducks swam across it. But now the frog boys were afraid to jump in ol for fear of freezing fast, and, or the same reason the ducks did not ften swim in it. Instead, when the e was thick enough, the animal chiliren skated on it with Uncle Wiggily. "But the pool isn't frozen now," sald the rabbit gentleman to himself one day almost at the end of the old year. "The water is open, and I shall go sit beside lot more jolly adventures in 1926 than I had in 1925." So over the fields and through the woods hopped the bunny gentleman, his pink nose twinkling like a stick of molasses candy, and soon he came within sight of the quiet pool.

In the summer there would have been nany noises at the pool. Birds would be singing in the bushes on its edge, rogs would be creaking in the shallows, ingfishers would dart into the water after something to eat, and Toodle and odle Flat Tail the beaver boys would making houses under water.
