CATALPA BLOSSOMS.

In that fair world of sun and tassel corn,
And soft repose beneath catawha trees,
Where trumpet cup uplifts the yellow horn
To fill the holds of summer cruising bees—
There first I saw her violet-shining eyes,
A Southland Nalad matchless as her skies. As an Orient blushing rose she seemed Among the white catalpas where she stood;
Her voice, soft-lipped, with old Castilian teemed

To hero-verse which stirred her Spanish blood; Sometimes her song across the rice-tipped
