THE EPIPHANY.

(From a selection of Hymns for public and private use.)

O Thou, who by a star didst guide The wise men on their way. Until it came and stood beside The place where Jesus lay:

Though by a star Thou dost not lead

Though now we know Thee but in part.
'Tis written in Thy word,
That "blessed are the pure in heart,
For they shall see the Lord." O Saviour, give, as then, Thy grace
To make us pure in heart;
That we may see Thee face to face,
Hereafter, as Thou art!

I very frequently heard a regret, if not a complaint, expressed that so very few English Clergymen thought it worth their while to visit America; and although it is not to be expected that excursions across the Atlantic can ever become common, yet assuredly, where leisure and the other requisites can be commanded, the trouble and expense of the voyage will be well repaid. To say nothing of the cities, lakes, and rivers of America, the people and their institutions will deserve an attentive study. But over and above all these objects of general interest, the English Churchman will have the opportunity of seeing how the Church in that land is enabled by God's providence and blessing to take root and flourish, without any of the external advantages which belong to it at home. The Mother and the Daughter Church may learn from each other lessons of wisdom, devotion, and self-denial, and these lessons will be best taught by a better understanding and a closer communion. I do not therefore consider it extravagant to say that an interchange of visits between the members of the English and American Churches may be made conducive to most important ends. Personal acquaintance tends powerfully to remove prejudice and to strengthen the bands of good fellow- on by external nature at this dreary season. The
