JOINT PRESS RELEASE
CANADA/UNITED STATES RESEARCH CONSULTATION GROUP ON THE
LONG RANGE TRANSPORT OF AIR POLLUTANTS

The Department of External Affairs today announced the release of the first Annual Report of the Canada/United States Research Consultation Group on the Long Range Transport of Air Pollutants (LRTAP). The release was simultaneously announced in Washington by the United States Department of State.

In recognition of its increasing significance, the two Governments requested the Group to provide them with a clear and concise statement of the nature of the LRTAP problem, as well as of its impact on the environment of eastern North America. Such a report was to provide a synthesis of existing scientific information which would make it accessible and understandable to the non-specialist community of interested persons. It was also recognized that such a report would be of assistance in the ongoing discussions on transboundary air quality.

Research programs in both countries are at an early stage, and have benefited from the coordinating efforts of the Group. The data in the report and the conclusions which it advances are of a preliminary nature. The Governments are providing this information to the public to encourage discussion of this important bilateral environmental issue. Further reports from the Research Consultation Group are expected in the future.

The bilateral Research Consultation Group was formed in October 1978 through an exchange of letters between the Embassy of Canada and the United States Department of State.
